A True Woman.

The following incident of travel is narrated by a correspondent of the Daily Saratogian. took place on the Reusselear and Saratoga rail-

When the train halted at Saratoga, among the passengers from the West came a man of about thirty years of age, clhowing his way through the crowd, and bearing in his arms a child. He was a poor man, his clothes were poor, he looked poor. Around his hat was tied a piece of soiled, worn crape. It was evidently all the mourning his scanty means would permit, for the mother of the child was dead. This man was homely. yet his face was an honest one. He handled the baby awkwardly, yet there was a tenderness in his sad look that showed the purity of a father's love. The little fellow lay asleep on his coarsely-clad knee; a stray sunbeam glanced across its tired face. They were both tired, the father and the child, for they had come from the far West, and as he placed his hard, toilworn hand to shield it from the golden rays there was in his look a mixture of sadness and care, as if his pent-up feelings had been so crowded back in the inner cells of his heart that even tears could have been no relief to the hidden anguish that was making his life a misery.

As he made effort after effort to stifle the cries and check the tears of his motherless babe, how he must have missed her who in his life of labor and privation had been his solace and comfort. An unbidden tear started to his eye, but he brushed it quickly away. All who saw himpitied him. At length a woman richly appareled, with an infant resting on the lap of her nurse beside her-she had been watching the man-said in a gentle tone, "Give me the child." The poor fellow looked at her with a look of gratitude, for there was a mother's tenderness in her voice. With humble resignation, as though he gave her his boy. The woman took it; its | soiled clothes rested on her costly silk; its tiny head was soon beneath her shawl, and in a moment all was still. Like the Grecian daughter who, through the iron bars, fed her starving father, so did this high-born lady from her breast feed the hungry child, and when on her gentle bosom the little one lay in calm and unvexed sleep, she put aside the shawl.

He said, as a tear swelled in his eye, and his by an efficient corps of officers. The Society has voice was thick with emotion: "Thank you," I'll acted wisely in calling to the management of its aftake him now." Then the woman's nature spoke business sagacity. By its energy and emerprise will wake him," and for mile after mile that no- of the country, and is now doing more business in Currency and Shinplasters bought at a small discount ble hearted woman held that poor man's child, and the South than any other insurance agency. Mr. Nobody.

I know a funny little man, As quiet as a mouse, Who does the mischief that is done In everybody's house. There's no one ever sees his face, And yet we all agree That every plate we break was cracked

By Mr Nebedy. 'Tis he who always tears our books-Who leaves the door ajar; He pulls the buttons from our shirts, And scatters pins afar. That squeaking door will always squeak,

For, prithee, don't you see, We leave the oiling to be done By Mr Nobody. He puts damp wood upon the fire,

That kettles cannot boil; His are the feet that bring in mud. And all the carpets soil. The papers always are mislaid; Who had them last but he? There's no one tosses them about But Mr Nobody.

The finger marks upon the door By none of us are made; We never leave the blinds unclosed To let the curtains fade. The ink we never spill; the boots That lying round you see Are not our boots! They all belong

To Mr Nobody!

FARMING LANDS.

I have about 700 Acres of Land which I will lease or a term of years. If desired, I will divide the ract into four parcels, to suit applicants. The Land lies on McAlpins Creek in Mecklenburg county, Philadelphia neighborhood, about 8 miles it was pain to part with him, even for a moment, from Charlotte.
