

A Dead Man before an Arkansas Court. An Arkansas correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune tells the following story of the rigid manner in which justice is meted out to men in that region:

Some years ago a man without family or relations lived in a county in this State, and was possessed of an estate worth $5,000. He went to New Orleans, and was absent for years without being heard from. The probate judge granted administration upon his estate, would it up and discharged the administrator. The man at length returned, he had been to Mexico. He applied to the judge for his property, when in open court the following dialogue took place: Dead man—If your Honor please, I want my effects returned to me, as you see I am not dead yet.

The Court—I know; that is, I, as a man know that you are alive and in court; but as a Court I know that you are dead; for the records of the court say so, and against their verity there is no aversion. So says Lord Coke and a good many other books I never read.

Dead man—But I want my property, and it's no matter to me whether your record lies or not. I am alive, have you transferred my property, and to deprive me of it without my consent is without the law.

The Court—If you insinuate that the Court lies the Court will send you to jail. Dead man—Send a dead man to jail. The Court—Mr. Sheriff, take the apparition out. Sheriff—Be thou ghost or goblin damned, I'll speak to thee. Come on; let's go take something to drink.

The Judge stuck to it that, so far as his court was concerned, he was dead, and he should stay dead. The poor fellow went into chancery and spent all he made in Mexico.

It is said that during the late famine in Algeria five hundred thousand Arabs perished. The poor wretches lived upon garbage of all sorts, and finally many of them were reduced to feeding upon each other. We dare say that had season had much to do with this terrible state of things; but we doubt not that if the evil could be traced to its foundation, it would be found that the measures incident to French domination had something to do with it; for where one country interferes in any way with the productive industry of another, distress and starvation are the infallible consequences, as witness the results of English rule in Ireland and India.

We are going, we are going, To a home beyond the skies, Where the fields are robed in beauty, And the sun-light never dies, Where the fount of joy is flowing In the valley green and fair, We shall dwell in love together, There will be no parting there.

We are going, we are going, And the music we have heard, Like the echo of the woodland, Or the carol of a bird; With the rosy light of morning On the calm and fragrant air, Still it murmurs, softly murmurs, There will be no parting there.

We are going, we are going, When the day of life is o'er— To that pure and happy region Where our friends have gone before; They are singing with the angels In that land so bright and fair; We shall dwell with them forever, There will be no parting there.

A CARD.

I would respectfully inform my numerous friends in this section of the State, and the adjoining districts of South Carolina, that the end for which my Physician recommended my engaging in some active pursuit for the restoration of my health, broken down in the active duties of the Gospel Ministry, having been successfully restored to enable my early return to that work, I have now determined to close out my entire stock of Goods by the 1st of January ensuing. At that time I expect, Providence permitting, to resume my ministerial labors; and in order to enable me to do so, my friends can aid me by calling and purchasing my stock, which I guarantee to sell them at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES. Those who know me need not be informed that this is no advertising dodge to procure trade, but a plain statement of facts. The public who may favor me with a call as well as the interests of the Church of which I am a Minister, will, it is to be hoped, be benefited by aiding me in so laudable a purpose. A. SINCLAIR, Springs' Corner, Charlotte. Nov 9, 1868.
