Receipts of the year to 30th September, $998,176 20; exceeding the receipts of last year, down to the same date, more than $210,000.

The London Athenaeum contains the following paragraph:

"Letters from Paris make mention of work about to appear there, which it is exnet of Louis Philippe. When the Duch eas of Berri was apprehended, she was so well pleased with the courtesy of Gen. The extreme beauty of its situation, the costly and chaste architecture of the dwelling, added to all its historical associations, would, we should think, ensure it a purchaser. Its present proprietor is Dr. Barclay, who bought it of the executor of Mr. Jefferson .- Richmond Compiler.

Rolling Wheat Ground .- Farmers are often heard mourning the effects of winter in injuring their wheat fields. The great and sudden changes of temperature throw the roots out of the ground, and thus kill A gentleman of New Bedford states, that the plant. A gentleman in the country addressed a passionate billet doux to a lady in the same town, adding this curious postcript .-"Please to send a speedy answer as I have somebody else in my eye."

Conjugal Lore .- A late London Journal contains an account of a most extraordinary attachment between husband and wife, demonstrating how deeply the jeys of wedded life may be implanted in the heart, and how fatal the consequence is of their sudden uprooting. The case occurred in Islington; was this-the wife of a poor man had died-he had approached the coffin to take a last look at the once loved partner of his joys and sorrows, between him and whom there had never been heard, in fifty years, the voice of dissention. As his eyes fell on the inanimate form, he suddenly dropped down, and, before medical aid could be procured, died!

The reader may fancy what must have been the happiness enjoyed by such a couple during the period of fifty years. How smoothly ran the stream of their joys-how blended their offections-how united their hearts! FOR THE JOURNAL.

REV. MR. JAY'S MORNING AND EVENING EXERCISES, PRAYERS & SERMONS There is, perhaps, no living preacher who has attracted more attention, and been heard with more pleasure, than the Rev. Mr. Jay. His popularity has not been, like that of some other preachers, transient burst of applause, but has continued through a long series of years, in a place celebrated above most places (Bath, Eng.) for the refine ment of its inhabitants, and visited by multitudes of the highest rank. Mr. Jay's reputation as a pulpit orator suffers no perceptible diminution. It often happens, however, that the popularity which eloquent preachers obtain in the pulpit is by no means maintained in their discourses as published from the press. This was remarkably the Whitfield, Kiewan and other fafact in regard to mous orators. But Mr. Jay is scarcely less eminent as a writer than as a speaker. Doubtless thousands who never heard of his eloquence, have admired his writings, for the fervent piety, admirable perspicuity, great originality, varied learning, and condensation of thought by which they are distinguished.

This celebrated Paster was born at Tisborne Wiltshire, on the 8th of May, 1769. "The earliest incident of his life, that I have heard," says an eminent clergyman, "was his being taken up and educated by the Rev. Cornelius Winter. This venerable man, as has been represented to me," adds the same clergyman, "was preaching before an association of ministers and was particularly attracted, by the uncommonly interesting and de vout appearance of a little boy whom he observed in the congregation. This boy proved to be William Jay, afterwards the biographer of Mr. Winter, and one of the most devoted and useful ministers of any age or country."

The parents of this levely youth being in hum ble circumstances, Mr. Winter resolved, if Providence should favor his design, to give him an education for the ministry. His progress as a student was so rapid, that at the age of 16 he was en couraged to enter the pulpit, and so successful were his juvenile efforts as a preacher, that he was invited to the Metropolis, where he officiated for two months at Rowland Hill's Chapel, in Black-

Modestly declining a regular pastoral charge on account of his youth and inexperience, he now retired to a village near Chippenham, where In zealously prosecuted his Theological Studies and occasionally preaching to the inhabitants for about two years; at the end of which period, having then, although scarcely of age, delivered upwards difficulty, persuaded to officiate at Hope Chapel, Hotwells; when after the expiration of a few months, he removed to Bath; having, at the earnest recommendation of his predecessor, when at the point of death, been chosen minister of the Independent Congregation in that city on the 31st of Jan. 1793, Argyle Chapel, the meeting-house of his hearers, has since that period, on account of his popularity, been repeatedly enlarged; and whenever he has officiated at other places, great crowds have invariably been attracted to his pulpit

In 1798, at the request of the Evangelical Society, he preached for a few weeks in Ireland, and it appears to have been his custom, since his first essay in Rowland Hill's Chapel, to officiate there regularly once a year—on these occasions, it is said that above 60 ministers and students in Divinity have sometimes been counted among his hearers. In 1810, Princeton College, N. J. conferred on him the degree of D. D. on account of his reputation as a pulpit orator, and the great merit of his literary productions. Mr. Jay has attained a high degree of reputation, both as a preacher and an author. In his discourses, many of which have been frequently reprinted, he dis plays a deep and chastened piety, combined with an extraordinary power of so revealing the ceitfulness of the human heart as to arrest the progress of religious delusion. He always brings home his subjects to every man's business and bo som, and never leaves truth in a state of speculation, but renders it practical and experimental in all its bearings. According to a writer in the Eu-ropean Magazine his eloquence is sometimes highly animated, but more commonly tender and pa thetic. He is a great favorite with Wilbertorce and Mrs. Hannah More, both of whom have at different periods attended upon his ministry, and have often expressed the highest admiration of his talents and character. We believe that the writingsor Jay, like tho e of Baxter, and Doddridge, and Owen, will be extensively read for many genera tions to come, and whilst we consider them as destined long to survive a very large propertion of cotemporary productions, we cordially recommend them to the favor of all our readers .- [Estracted with a few additions, from the Biblical Repertory and Theological Review for July, 1833,
