

Foreign Intelligence.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, NOV. 7.

Three packets arrived yesterday, viz: the North America, Capt. Dixey, which sailed from Liverpool the 1st of October; Philadelphia, Morgan, which sailed from Portsmouth the 8th of Oct.; and the Francis Dupau, which sailed from Havre on the 8th. By these arrivals the editors of the New York Daily Advertiser are put in possession of Havre dates to the 8th, Paris to the 7th, London to the 6th, and Liverpool to the 1st October, inclusive. These journals are almost wholly occupied with the death of Don Pedro, and the affairs of Spain—the latter continues in the same unsettled state.

The Paris papers of Tuesday state, that Don Carlos is still in Navarre, guarded by Erasó; he goes from village to village in order to keep up the enthusiasm. The Junta has withdrawn to Lecároz. Moya, in accepting the appointment of Commander-in-chief, has made known to the Queen that his health will not permit him to put himself at the head of the troops immediately.

We learn from one of our correspondents in Italy, that Don Miguel is meditating an invasion of Portugal, and that he has been encouraged in this mad attempt by the advice of the Pope, and by the offers of pecuniary assistance from the same quarter. This explains the movements of the Prince, and his precipitate departure from Genoa. It would appear that he thinks of disembarking at a Spanish port, especially if his hopes should be realized as to important successes to be obtained by Don Carlos.

Intelligence from Paris states that the projected marriage of Donna Maria with the Prince of Leichtenberg is particularly offensive to the French Government. Upon this subject, as well as that of Don Carlos, a dispute has arisen, it is said, between Lord Palmerston and Prince Talleyrand. Morning Post.

A duel has been fought at Allier, between M. Edgard Ney, the son of the celebrated Marshal, and a M. Petitjean Montbelair. The sword of the latter passed through Ney's right hand.

The intelligence of Don Pedro's death at Lisbon, reached Paris on the 5th.

M. Carrel, the Editor of the Nathaniel, was again under arrest at Paris at one o'clock on the night of the 4th of October, and was to be examined the following morning before the commissary of Police.

General Drouot, Comte d'Elon, the new Governor of Algiers, with his suite, had arrived there on the 26th September. LONDON.

It was announced from London that a great sensation was created in the city, in consequence of the failure for a large amount of Mr. Raikes, a director of the Bank of England.

We regret to announce the death of that most excellent and exemplary Prelate, the Right Rev. Dr. Gray, Lord Bishop of Bristol.

Stock Exchange, Oct. 4. Half past four o'clock.—The Spanish Funds acknowledged by the Procuradores have experienced a further very great rise, and the Cortes and Rentas Perpetuallas are now at nearly the same quotation. The result is attributed to letters said to have arrived by a mercantile courier, who left Madrid on the 28th ult., announcing that the majority of the Finance Committee, with the exception of one member M. Torrens Miranda, had gone over to the opinion of the minority, and intended to propose to the Chamber, on the following day, the entire payment of all the loans, except Guabard's.

SPANISH DEBTS.

PARIS, OCT. 9.—The following telegraphic despatch from Bayonne, dated Madrid, Sept. 30, was received yesterday:

"The Ambassador of France at the Court of Spain to the Minister of Foreign Affairs. "The Chamber of Procuradores, in its sitting this day, has, contrary to the recommendation of its Committee, divided the debt into active and passive, in the proportions of two thirds for the active part, and one third for the passive." GREECE.

The revolt of the relatives of Colotroni and Colopula had been suppressed, and the leaders, after a sanguinary conflict, conveyed in chains to Nauplia.

Another insurrection has broken out in Mainz and the Moser, among the partisans of Colotroni. They demand the dismissal of all the foreign functionaries employed by King Otho, and a redress of other grievances arising from the Bavarian measures of the Regency. The Government has under its orders 7000 men, of whom 4000 are German volunteers. The English had despatched some ships from Malta to the coast.

TURKEY.

IMPORTANT FROM FRANCE.

The following, published in the Albany Daily Advertiser of Saturday last, as an extract from the Paris Correspondent of that Journal, contains information of great moment, in a form entitling it to more credit than is usually given to common reports:

Paris, Sept. 29, 1834.

Dear Sir: I presume you get all the news of interest through the English and French papers, and, therefore, of the movements of the Spanish and Portuguese I need say nothing. But perhaps it may be new to you, that there is an emute talked of in this country, which may yet reduce Louis Philippe to the ranks.

"It is well known that this personage has adopted a very different course from what was anticipated at the outset of his career. Liberal principles are at a discount with him, and much inquietude has existed in the saloons, on the subject of his future intentions.

"A new movement appears to be projected, and if it takes place, the consequences will be momentous.

"It is proposed to form a Grand Convention of the National Guards of France, to consist of Deputies chosen by them from each department, and they will require from the King some further concessions to liberty, under the penalty of—the consequences!

"The plan is no secret. I will give you further information as soon as I can get it. While in your country you appear to be tending to a concentration of power in your President, which time will show to be dangerous, here, as well as in England, the people are trying to restrain that very tendency. Yours."

Going! Going! Going!!

AND will be gone, unless some friend stops or ward to my relief—Bring BUTTER with you, is all I ask—Come now if you are disposed to administer to the wants of your suffering fellow-creatures—I will reward you for your trouble—I am in earnest, and hope you will come instantly. J. D. BOYD. Nov. 21, 1834.

Eclipse of the Sun.—There will be almost a total Eclipse of the Sun on the 30th inst. beginning at 54 minutes past one o'clock in the afternoon and ending at 29 minutes after 3.

Astronomical science has made us so familiar with these phenomena, that they are no longer viewed with the superstitious fear which, before the light of science and Religion had illumined the world, filled the Ancients with such consternation and alarm. Eclipses of the Sun in particular were regarded as most calamitous omens, presaging death or heavy misfortune. PLUTARCH informs us, that at Rome, during Eclipses of the Moon, the inhabitants set up loud shouts, and made noise with brazen instruments, thinking by these means to ease her in labor. Even at this day, the Chinese suppose Eclipses to be occasioned by great Dragons, who seize upon the Sun and Moon to devour them. When an Eclipse happens, they make all possible noise with drums, kettles, &c. till the monster, frightened as they imagine by the noise, lets go his prey.

Most persons have heard of the good account to which CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS turned his Astronomical knowledge in 1493. Having been driven upon the Island of Jamaica, and being distressed for want of provisions which the natives refused to furnish, he threatened them with the plague, and foretold an Eclipse of the sun as the token of it. The Eclipse happened according to his prediction, the natives became terrified at what they considered an indication of the Divine displeasure, and entreated him to beseech the Great Spirit to avert the threatened calamity. He consented to do so. The Eclipse departed, and provisions were furnished in abundance for his famished crew.—Raleigh Register.

Curious fact.—A gentleman brought up with him from Old Point last evening, a shell-drake with its bill enclosed between the shells of an oyster, which had been picked up as it was drifting to the shore, by the toll keeper of the draw bridge, at the mouth of Mill Creek. The shell-drake being a great diver, is supposed, in one of his submarine visits, to have found the oyster resting on the sandy bottom, with its valves distended, and presenting too great a temptation for any hungry duck to withstand, he without ceremony thrust in his long narrow bill to extract the delicious morsel; when the oyster, not approving of such familiarities suddenly collapsed the portals of its little citadel, and held the intruder's head under water until it suffocated him; while, unable or unwilling to let go his hold, both oyster and duck were borne to the shore by the reluctant tide.

Raccoons have frequently been caught in the same way; being exceedingly fond of oysters they take advantage of a very low tide and a moonlight night, to prowl along the shore in search of their favorite prey, which they are sure to find with mouths a-gape. The knowing ones, it is said, drop a pebble into the opening before they venture to put a paw in; but the uninitiated of the tribe, forgetting this precaution, are taken prisoners incalculably. Norfolk Herald.

[From the Boston Daily Advertiser of Monday.]

The Trial of Mitchell.—The details of this trial are of the most peculiar and unusual kind; we had intended to publish them, but learn that they are better adapted for a distinct publication, than for the columns of a newspaper, and also that they are to appear in pamphlet form immediately, having been carefully taken down by a member of the bar.

The case of Mitchell is certainly the most wonderful of any in the annals of crime. A boy of 11 years of age, coolly, and with deliberate purpose, tying another of eight years to two trees by his wrists, after having stripped him stark naked, lacerating his body from head to foot with the most cruel flagellations. Attempting to drown him by thrusting him three several times into a pond, and worse than all, most inhumanly naming him in a manner, at the very thought of which nature revolts, and to detail which the heart fails, and the pen almost refuses to do its office,—assuredly may be deemed a phenomenon among criminals. The jury were detained but twenty minutes, and returned a verdict of GUILTY. The prisoner was defended by John Neal, Esq. and the prosecution conducted by the attorney General. Judge Emery's Charge was very impressive, and indeed, from the emotion he felt, was quite touching to the feelings of the large audience that filled the Court House. Sentence has not yet been pronounced.

"The land of potatoes."—We do not mean "Sweet Ireland," gentle reader, though the Emerald Isle is not unfrequently recognized in the cognomen. We mean our own land, the land of sweet potatoes. We have at our office, for the inspection of the curious, some of the largest of these fine vegetables, we venture to say, that any of our friends have seen—one among them weighing four pounds and seven ounces. They are from the grounds of our respected fellow citizen John McWilliams, esq., of this county, and will perhaps challenge comparison with those grown by any Jackson man in the State. Washington (N. C.) Whig.

PHILADELPHIA, NOV. 5.

Sudden Death.—Mr. Mathew Jardella, a jeweller of this city, whilst sitting yesterday talking to his partner, Mr. Dubois, apparently in good health, suddenly fell dead. He has left a wife who is not expected to recover from the shock. Verdict of the Coroner's Jury, that he came to his death by overflow of blood to the heart.

On the third instant, two colored men, Francis Dawson and William Moore, were playing with an unloaded gun, and pointing it at one another, at the house of John Howler, at the corner of Seventh and Small streets, when some colored boys came up and offered to sell a pistol to them. Moore asked the boys if it was loaded, who said that it was not, for they had blown through it. Moore primed it, pointed it at Dawson, and said, I'll shoot you; to the astonishment of all, Dawson fell bleeding, a ball from the pistol having entered his left side and passed through his lungs. He was taken to the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he lingered until the 7th inst. when he died.

John Dudley, of Deerfield, was a captain in the militia. He was an old bachelor, had an old maid for a housekeeper, and tilled the ground like an honest man. He was acquainted with Governor Wentworth, and frequently called upon him when at Portsmouth, that he might tell his rustic neighbors how thick he was with his Excellency. To add to his importance, he once invited the Governor to call upon him at Deerfield, on his way into the country; and the Governor promised to do so. The captain expected the visit some time in a certain week, and kept near his house busily engaged as usual. One very warm day his house keeper came pulling into the field to inform him that a grand carriage, which must be the Governor's was at a little distance. The captain ran into the house and hardly had time to slip on his military red coat and cocked hat, ere his Excellency drove up. With his trusty sword in hand, Dudley ran into the street assuming a true captain like strut, paid a martial salute to his Excellency, who on beholding him, burst into a hearty laugh. This rather discomposed the man of the sword; but he was put to immediate flight by the following speech of the Governor. "Captain Dudley, I am glad to see you, but think your appearance as a military man would be improved, if you were to add to your uniform a pair of breeches!" an article which the good captain in his haste to pay his respects, had entirely forgotten.

Ashe.—Dr. Howdy Ashe, lately deceased, was nephew to Dr. Howdy, who wrote the "Suspicious Husband." I had the pleasure of sitting next to Dr. Ashe one day at dinner, when he began a story with "As eleven of my daughters and I were crossing Piccadilly—" "Eleven of your daughters, doctor?" I rather rudely interrupted. "Yes, sir," rejoined the doctor, "I have nineteen daughters all living—never had a son; and Mrs. Ashe, myself, and nineteen female Ashe plants, at down, one and twenty, to dinner, every day. "Sir, I am smothered with petticoats." He probably meant Ashe.

Warning to Tailors.—An ingenious mechanic is making a machine for the purpose of sewing. It is to be on the stocking frame principle, and he has so far succeeded us to form a straight seam, which, when pressed down, looks equally strong and neat as if done with a needle. Should the plan succeed generally, a suit of clothes, after they are cut out, may be put together in one hour, by one man, with the exception of working the button holes, and putting the buttons on!

Military EXECUTIONS for Sale at this OFFICE.

Old Mr. Parsons.—Speaking of old Mr. P. reminds us of a story. When he first engaged in navigation, he kept a ship chandlery and grocery at the head of Hancock's wharf, (it's Boston we are speaking of) and had fitted out three schooners loaded with American produce for the West Indies, which, with his stock in store, constituted all his property. For fitting out these vessels he became considerably in debt, and as they had been long absent without being heard from, it was supposed they were lost. The tradesmen found it inconvenient to wait longer for their pay, and were at length clamorous, Mr. P. whose cash was expended, dealt out most of his goods to his creditors. There was one blacksmith, however, to whom he was considerably in arrears, but who never mentioned to him the subject of his debt. Mr. P. called upon, and told him if he ever expected to be paid, to come and receive his quota of goods, as it would soon be too late. "Never mind that," said young, "I am not worried, if you are not." A short time afterwards, one cold winter morning, Mr. P. was roused from his slumbers by a loud knocking at the door, and on popping his head out of the window, he saw his friend of the bellows. "Mr. Parsons, said he, "I believe that is one of your schooners just this side of the castle." He lost no time in throwing on his clothes and repairing to the wharf, and to his joy found the blacksmith's suspicion correct. She had arrived with a return cargo of gold and silver, having sold all her produce at a great profit. In less than forty-eight hours the other two arrived under similar circumstances. This was the foundation of the great fortune which he afterwards accumulated. It is needless to say that the blacksmith was paid to his heart's content—and more than that, on the return of each annual thanksgiving till the end of Mr. P.'s life, his family was presented with a box of raisins and a barrel of flour. Such was the character of that eminent merchant, Ebenezer Parsons.—New York Com.

A Generous Undertaker.—Mr. John Rudd, of Emsworth, advertises in an Irish paper that he will send his hearse and a pair of horses, on the lowest terms, with any corpse to any place of interment in town or country, and any person dying in the neighborhood of Emsworth, whose friends not being able to pay for his hearse, the said Mr. Rudd will inter them free of any expense, and give them help to lay the coffin, employment being more his object than emolument. This is certainly carrying a man's benevolence farther than we have often heard of before, and well might the London paper from which we take the advertisement, head its paragraph—"The American's out done." For we certainly do not carry on the funeral business in this country at so cheap a rate as that—not are our undertakers so kind hearted towards their customers. Very few of them are so anxious to bury their fellow citizens, as to make the "employment more an object than emolument." We should suppose that all the dying people in the neighborhood of Emsworth would patronize Mr. John Rudd.

The Doctor who forgot his Errand.—In the biography of Hannah More, just published, it is related that when about sixteen, a dangerous illness brought her under the care of Dr. Woodward, a physician of eminence at that day, and distinguished by his correct taste. On one of his visits, being led into conversation with his patient on subjects of literature, he forgot the purpose of his visit in the fascination of her talk; till suddenly recollecting himself, when he was half down stairs, he cried out, "Bless me! I forgot to ask the girl how she was?" and returned to the room exclaiming, "How are you to day, my poor child?"

From a letter of Dr. Franklin.—Treat your wife always with respect, it will procure respect to you, not only from her but from all that observe it. Never use any slight expressions to her, even in jest; for slights in jest, after frequent bandyings, are apt to end in anger earnest. Be studious in your profession, and you will be learned. Be industrious and frugal, and you will be rich. Be sober and temperate, and you will be healthy. Be in general virtuous, and you will be happy. At least you will by such conduct, stand the best chance for such consequences.

We understand that an individual named Guer, or Grier, a foreigner, has been arrested on suspicion of being the person who assassinated Perry, on the evening of the election in Locust Ward. He had a partial examination before the Mayor yesterday morning, and was committed for further hearing. The presumptive evidence against him is said to be very strong. We shall give the result of the subsequent examination as soon as it is obtained.

The number of Newspapers now published in this country is 1265—of which 108 are published in Massachusetts; 140 in Ohio; 220 in Pennsylvania, and 267 in the State of New York. In the Territory of Florida, there are already established 5; in Michigan 7; and in Arkansas 2. In the year 1828, the number of newspapers published in this country was 851, in 1810 it was 259; and in 1775 only 37!
