had sway, the Popes have exercised. "temporal power" as flowing from their assumed position, as the vicegerents of the Almighty -the keepers of the keys of Heaven. And, if it be true, that the Pope is in fact the vicegorent of God-the keeper of the keys of Heaven-the arbiter of human fate holding the power to accurse and to bless-to save and to condemn, we see no propriety in drawing distinctions between his temporal and spiritual power. Indeed some such could exist. God is omnipotent. If the Pope be his vicegorent, he must be omnipotent also. Take from the Pope this compotence and he is but a mere man. And that is precisely his condition, in our judgment, with no more power over the future destiny of any human being, than moon, or earth. But to the point.

Pape Gregory VII. deposed Henry IV. In his Bull be said :

"In this confidence, for the dignity and defence of Thy holy church, in the name of Almighty Gol, the Pather, Son, and Holy Ghost, I depose imperial and royal administration King Henry, son of Henry, person may even print and pullish his sometime Emperor, who too holdly and thoughts, and all kinds of monstrous porsometime Emperor, who too boldly and thoughts, and all kinds of monstrous por-rashly bath laid his hands on Thy church. tents of opinions, and profess privately I absolve all Christian subjects to the Eupire from that oath whereby they were pleases, wont to plight their faith unto true kings; for it is right that he should be deprived of

The whole reading world knows that in former times, and down to a recent date, the power has not only been claimed but exercised. If the Pope be in fact the vice-greent of God, he had a right to depose kings and princes. But we will now quote from Brownson's Review, to the point.

In the January number (1804,) of the Review, page 47, in an article entitled "The two orders, spiritual and temporal," Prof. Brownson says:

" Now, although we do not say that the Church commissions the State, or imposes the condition on which it holds its right to govern, yet as it holds under the law of Christ, and on conditions imposed by that law, we do say, that she, (the Catholic Church,) as the guardian and judge of that have, must have the power to take con. From the New York Tribune. LIGHT BREAKING.

There is a Journal published at Washington called The Washington Organ, which is, as its name imports, the National organ of the Know Nothings. The following Fx. tracts show the way in which that journal speaks of the late outrages in Kansas and the return of Gov. Reeder to his post as Chief Magistrate of that Territory :

"Governor Reeder is to be sent back among the Archbishop Kenrick, in his pastoral letter, just published in Baltimore, makes the following allosion to the temporal power of the Pope:
