

A CEMETERY WITHOUT A MONUMENT.—The most of caskets is the ones. It may be the common language ever will be used in the language of sublimity.

It is the custom of the deceased on its deathbed to be transferred to paper. Its practice is continual, however, in a storm and in its place, so things which had endeavored a thousand times to make love, but until I was on my deathbed, looking out upon its last mountain waves, feeling that sternness was distant from me the thickness of a single leaf. I had time in vain to feel and kiss the glances and glances of the sea. I have first felt what John of Patmos meant when he said of heaven, "There shall be no more sea." But there is one element of mortal sublimity which impressed me most, and which I should be pleased if I could transfer, in all its vividness, to the soul of the reader. This is the largest of our species, and all its shoulders shone with a magnificence. All other grand scenes, in all lands, show some symbols of division between the great and the small, the rich and the poor; but in that ocean between the Ring and the Crown, the prince and the peasant, are alike undistinguished. The same wave rolls over all, the same region, by the monotony of ocean, is vast in its power. There their remains the same storm-beaten and the same sun-shine; and there, unmarked, the weak and the powerful, the plumed and the unadorned, will close up until awoken by the same trumpet, the sea will give up its dead. No man rises to point out where their ashes are scattered, or where the bones of the great and wise can go and shed tears of sympathy. Yet that cemetery bathes in the light which others see the beauty of reflected in such splendor. Over no other are so infinite traces of the power of Jehovah. Never can I forget my days of pilgrimage, passed over the highest of mountains, without a single monument—

Legislature.

This body met in Raleigh, on the 15th instant. We shall endeavor to keep our readers informed of its proceedings at the earliest day possible. The session will be an interesting one as important measures are expected to be brought before it.

South Carolina State Fair.

On Tuesday night last, in company with many others, we started for Columbia to attend the State Fair. Having made provision for our accommodation as we thought, we were ready put out, having our "better half" along when we arrived at our place of destination, to be informed that we could not be accommodated. When we found that to be the case, however, we started to seek a place where to lay our heads. We had heard that all the hotels were full and many had to be turned off, but we thought this might be exaggerated, but when we attempted to get a place, we found the half had not been told. At one hotel we were informed that 150 had supper the night before without any prospect of a place to lodge. At the American Hotel the landlady stated to us that after breakfast he might be able to afford a room, and having a loop to hang a loop upon, we readily satisfied, took breakfast and were ready to proceed to the Fair Ground, when another mishap beset us. Our trunk was among the missing, although we had stated to the omnibus driver where it was to be left, but after some trouble we received it all right.

COLUMBIA EXHIBITION.—It is becoming quite the rage among young ladies to cut the hair off their heads, and wear it as if it were a profusion of short, frizzled, curly, which are combed back from the temple, and form into rows, one above the other, the general effect being somewhat irregular, and very expressive, "charming," is the almost universal verdict, and a "tourist" is the consequence among boarding school girls and those of our bairns who like to "go to the fair." The fair has spread its wings to every corner of the land, and every town to the barbershop, and the duration of its reign is but a portion of those treasures of dark and golden hair.

MACHINE FOR SAVING AND DISTRIBUTING OF OIL.—A new and ingenious machine for the collection and distribution of oil has recently been invented—the chief peculiarity of the apparatus being that the types are not distributed by one and the same machinery—any liquid can be separated. The process by which the little bits of oil are caught up and put down again just in the right place, with never a single drop upon the human eye, is the most remarkable part of the way in which the apparatus is constructed again. It is a constant supply for the lamp, and the saving device by which a few drops of oil, the smallest quantity of oil, are spoken of as evidence of the great superiority on the part of the invention.

SCOTCH BARRACKS PROFITABLE.—The Scotch (or) Telegraph authorities evidently say that Edinburgh has now twelve hundred miles of railroad built and paid for, and yielding to the stockholders more than an average of $100 per centum in pure dividends. Two hundred miles of road and rails are to be added to the present during the coming season. The Scotch barracks generally are profitable to both Scotland and South Carolina this year, and generally. The fact is, a large number of Scotchmen are really engaged in the South and build largely. There is no room for competition there.

SCOTTISH BARRETT'S PROFITABLE.—In the introduction to an able article in the Scotsman's Journal of Medicine for the present month, the writer, Dr. Robert D. Russell, of that city, advances the character of the State of the South as follows: "My belief has been fixed to one point, that the yellow fever epidemic of 1855 is the epidemic of the present year, and it is a rapidly spreading scourge, and must be checked now, profiting and saving the health of the South and healthily. There is no room for competition there."

er, been in Columbia on any former occasion, and thus the difficulty of accommodating such a crowd. The citizens were called upon to aid the hotels in accommodating the visitors by at least affording places to sleep, but as far as we could learn no offers were made, at least we heard of none at the hotel we were staying at. This want of hospitality among the citizens will certainly prevent many from visiting Columbia at another Fair.

We will do the Landlord of the American Hotel the justice to say that he did everything that he could to accommodate all who came to him. In fact, he disliked to turn off any one, but promised to do the best he could for them, and all appeared satisfied. Indeed, we never saw a landlord try to give more general satisfaction than "mine host" of the American. And although some were disposed to complain of the fare, yet we can make an allowance for the greatest number to be provided for, which was unexpected; and should any of our friends have occasion to visit Columbia, they will find themselves well cared for at the American Hotel.

We will recur to this subject again next week.

The Hon. Josiah Quincy, Sen., of Boston was seriously injured, on the 8th instant, by being run over in Tremont street. His injuries are said to be of a fatal character. He was injured on the back of the head, by being thrown upon the pavement. His legs were also run over by the vehicle which came in collision with him. The last accounts state that he would soon be out again.

"We have received from A. M. Gorham, publisher, "A Vindication of the Legal Profession, contained in an Address delivered by Wm. Hooper, D. D. L. D., at Wake Forest College, in June, 1857, by an Advocate." This pamphlet is for sale at Lowrie's Book Store, at 125 cents.
