Slave Trade Laws.
is considering the proposition for a repeal of the slave trade laws, two considerations present themselves, either of which would justify a effort to effect it.

first, the constitutional aspect. If it was intended that the control of the question should be given to Congress, then the laws should be repealed, because of their unconstitutionalitity, and this position might be taken, whether the policy or expediency of repealing the trade was entertained or not.

Next, the aspect of expediency. There nothing of bargain in the clause of the Constitution making it obligatory upon Congress to prohibit the trade; it is merely peremptory; it means nothing more than that Congress may prohibit after the year 1808, then, who regard its re-opening as expedient for Southern interest, may, with effect propriety, and without any violation of constitutional obligation or good faith, stand for its repeal. This leaves pretty ground for that large class whose interests lead them to seek the irresponsibility and quietude of middle position in the question, and with such inviting ground before us, we shall not be surprised to find much the larger party of the three—the aspect of expediency, we shall not consider, as Col. Yancey does not. We have frequently given arguments against it, and in view of the question, would also be open to it. We turn, then, to the first—Congress the right under the Constitution to prohibit the slave trade? Col. Yancey contends not; here we take issue.

After the Constitution had been formed, it was submitted to conventions of the several States for ratification. Here, again, we find the same opinions expressed. Hawkins Lowndes opposed the Constitution, because, after the year 1808, Congress would have the power to prohibit the trade. He brought all the fervor of his eloquence to bear upon it. He used the following expressive language in reference to this clause: "Why confine us to twenty years, or rather why limit us at all?" He was fully impressed by the idea that the trade was to be limited, and that at the expiration of the twenty years, Congress would prohibit it. Gen. Pinckney, Charles Pinckney, Maj. Butler and Gov. Rutledge, who had been members of the Federal Convention, were all members of the Legislature when this assertion was made. Yet not one of them repudiated the assertion that the trade was confined to twenty years. Gen. Pinckney acknowledged that restrictions might be put upon the trade after the year 1808. Hon. Robert Barnwell and the latter, charged with the murder of Frederick Thorburn in Newton.

More Africans.—Mobile Mercury says: "We heard a gentleman who is up to snuff say that another cargo of Africans had been landed upon our Gulf coast, within a few days, and that the captain of the craft that brought them was in our city—he had seen him and talked with him."

The Raleigh Standard learns that President Buchanan has tendered to Hon. D. M. Barringer, of this State, the mission to Central America; but that Mr. B. has felt himself constrained by personal considerations to decline the appointment.

NOVEL FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.—The Fourth of July was celebrated on the summit of Mt. Prospect, nearly 3,000 feet above the sea level! At this extraordinary altitude, two thousand people assembled, and while the chilly winds swept over the summit, and the clouds hovered around the granite brow of this famous mountain, all gave honor to our nation's birth day. An enthusiastic celebration took place also on the Tippecanoe battle ground. There were about 10,000 soldiers from Louisville, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, &c., in the encampment, when convened in print, to weigh well the consequences, and to sound thoroughly the ground upon which, with more of interest than judgment and circumspection, he invites them to follow him.

ner affect the 1st and 4th clauses in the ninth section of article 1. Colonel Yancey wrote, after continued provocation, to the editor of a newspaper, which referred to his private affairs, and especially to his not paying his debts. He said substantially: "It is true that I have not always paid my debts punctually, and that I owe money. One cause of this is, that I have not pressed those who owe me for payment. As an instance of this, I enclose your father's note, made to me thirty years ago, for money lent him to educate his boy."

DR. HAWKES.—We learn from the Raleigh Standard that at a meeting of the Trustees of the University held in that city on Thursday last, it was resolved to tender to the above eminent scholar and historian, the Professorship of History in the University of the State. The "Standard" thinks he will accept the appointment. No better one could have been made.

The Professorship of Rhetoric and Logic will be filled by the Board of Trustees at their annual meeting in December next.

DEBATE OF CONGRESSMEN ELECT.—Three of the members of Congress elected to the next House of Representatives have died, viz: Hon. Thomas L. Harris, in the sixth district of Illinois; Hon. Cyrus Spinck, in the 14th district of Ohio; and Hon. William G. Goode, in the fourth district of Virginia. Messrs. Goode and Harris were representatives in the last Congress.

THE HON. OWEN NORMAN.—Gen. Pinckney acknowledged that the trade was to be limited, and that at the expiration of the twenty years, Congress would prohibit it. Gen. Pinckney, Charles Pinckney, Maj. Yet not one of them repudiated the assertion that the trade was confined to twenty years. Gen. Pinckney acknowledged that restrictions might be put upon the trade after the year 1808. Hon.
