Poetry.

The Thunder-Storm.

Look! the black cloud rises high,
Now it spreads aghast
See! the opening lightning flings
Hark! the thundering
Yet will I not shrink back,
And the storm is o'er.

Mid the summer's sultry day,
When the hot winds round us play,
We stand in awe,
But the dark storm fills the sky,
And the vivid lightning flings
When the storm is o'er.

When the black cloud rises high,
Now it spreads aghast
See! the opening lightning flings
Hark! the thundering
Yet will I not shrink back,
And the storm is o'er.

Some folks, do what you will,
They will let their tongues run still,
Click, click, click, click, click, click, click,
Dug, dug, dug, dug, dug, dug, dug,
Both night and morning.

But, the friends we live among,
Do not tire them with your tongue;
Click, click, click,
See them'll wish you gone,
Then take this warning.

When you give or take,
The words you speak are all alike,
Ours, yours, mine, yours, mine,
Think, and then you'll speak,
Ours, yours, mine, yours, mine,
To please the better.

George! George! The words leaped from her lips, as the sister sprang forward to the low bed where the youth lay, his white, sharpened face, gleaming death like from amidst his hair.

He opened his large eyes suddenly—a flush passed over his pallid face.
He stretched out his thin arms: "O Janet!
I have prayed God for the sight of you once more before I die."

His pulse is stronger than it has been for many years, and his face has a better hue, said the Doctor, a few hours later, as he made his morning visit through the wards of the hospital.

His sister came yesterday and watched
