From the South Carolistan The Youthful Warrior.

AV HARRY HOPEPUL,

The gary battle had begun, Confusion reign's through the field, In thursder tones the caucon peal'd, With beignify above the rising sun; And men were scattered for and rear-Dring and dead were mingled there.

There, on that day of bloody strife, A yanthful warger by alone, Weunded and dwing, and life near gone, With all that shorms a morning life; He did not raise a heart wrang high, For doner taught how love to

That gentle youth was levely fair, With evenest ayea of energie hate, And fall of hope his doubl like getshis flowing ringlets mutted seven The mostal wound to him was giv'n, Reviv'd has hopes of higher in Heav'n

The sun was embing in the sky, Shades of the avening gasher'd fast-The extreme's rare bad cere'd to last-When from that brave youths' lips there o Sweet states to his Maker's name

Appeared a hero of the atrife, Auxiliary to save the jun'd one's life, He finds a Rible near his hand-A mother's gift, thren' thee's commend.

Brook thought ! to God thus given ! That he felt a mother's love, And held the Werd of Him about or everthating juy had streven ; The golden mayor of holy tenth Prepar'd for Jeath that noble youth,

In poure he brench'd no life away, Her derkness simils the light of day, let not a tear for iller he shed, The Christian and the gallent deed. Concusta, September 6, 1862.
