

STUBBORN FACTS.

From the State Agricultural Journal
The most obvious truths are frequently the most overlooked.

In an extended machinery where every movement obeys one mighty impulse, the reality of the power may be obvious, and the apprehension of it be prevented by those very movements, which are the evidence of energy.

In like manner, the employments of men are so various from the throne downward, and our eye is so filled with this variety, that agriculture, the spring of this extended action, is liable to be thrown into forgetfulness, by the abundant evidence of its power.

But let the sun for one year withhold his ordinary smiles, and the clouds their accustomed treasure, and the earth her increase, and the paralytic shock extended to every limb of the body politic, will quickly indicate where is the seat of life, and what is the spring of motion.

When the fields languish, no substitute for their product can be found, and our dependence upon the husbandman is realized.

There is no wealth of nations which is not obtained from the earth, and no wealth yielded by the earth, but in the consequence of cultivation.

The curse of barter can neither be repealed nor mitigated but by the hand of industry; while at her touch the earth opens her bosom and pours out her munificence.

The incident cannot prosper, their affairs will rush into confusion, and end in nakedness and shame.

Forests will not fall, and harvest will not move, without labor.

The products of agricultural enterprise, remaining after the wants of the husbandman are supplied, is the sustaining means of wealth to that whole portion of society devoted to other employments.

If the husbandman has nothing to spare, by whom shall the professional man be fed? What raw material shall the artisan manufacture? or what product of industry shall the merchant barter? Cut the sinews of agricultural enterprise, and reduce the ambition of the husbandman to the simple supply of his own wants, and you consign to famine every professional man, stop the movements of every machine, and recall from the ocean every ship, to rot in ignoble indolence beside the dock.

The surplus product of the farm is the spring of universal activity, without which civilized society would fall back upon barbarism.

Agriculture may be encouraged by association and dissemination of agricultural knowledge, and by the excitement of a spirit of improvement in all kinds of husbandry; by the improvements of roads, construction of canals and multiplication of various facilities of inland navigation; and by wise acts of legislation, calculated to secure to the husbandman a steady market and a fair price.

Honor due to the husbandman should be awarded upon the same terms to the machine and manufacturer; and to that entire class of the community who sustain their families and bless their country by manual labor.

The hard hand of labor must not be a token of disgrace, but the badge of honor.

Agricultural Societies bring together the respectable agriculturist of a district, give them a place in the public eye, and induce the respectable characters of the other departments of society to pay to the husbandman their tribute of respect.

They tend also to increase judicious experiments, to quicken the eye of observation, to scatter the scattered results of individual experience, as well as to afford that excitement to industry, which honor and profit fail not to afford.

I have mentioned a steady market, and a fair profit as among the encouragement to be afforded to agriculture. No human skill can indeed control the elements or regulate the seasons, so as to secure the equitable fruitfulness of the earth, in this or any other climate or so control the family of nations as to prevent the fluctuations of demand and price, but much may be done, by a wise policy to check these fluctuations of the market, and especially to withhold them from extremes, which are destructive to national industry.

No calculation is greater than the speciousness, basing the so extended calculations of industry, and converting the husbandmen of a nation into a body of speculators.

Tempting at one time, by high prices, to adventurous purchases and lavish family expenses, and then by the glut of the market and the fall of produce dashing the hopes of thousands of families and rearing upon their ruins a monarchical aristocracy.

A steady market, and a fair profit, for the product of the field, is a great blessing to any rural people.

Like the steady attraction of the sun

it keeps up the motion of surrounding bodies, and like his light, diffuses cheerfulness and activity through all the works of God.

MARKSMANSHIP EXTRAORDINARY.

An elderly man named Beckwith, residing in one of the Peninsula counties, came to this city last Thursday on business. He brought with him an old-fashioned flint-lock rifle to have a stock and lock put on.

The old flint-lock was fired seven times, and only once missed its aim. The old gentleman, after making two shots at small objects to one side to get his hand steady, as he said, handed his son a potato and stationed at 50 yards distance, holding the potato between his thumb and forefinger.

The rifle cracked and the potato fell cloven in three or four pieces. One of the larger pieces was then thrown in the air, the marksman keeping at the same distance, and again the shot told. An inch and a half auger was then produced, and a hole bored in the fence, behind which was fastened a piece of white paper.

At the distance of 60 yards the marksman sent a ball clear through the aperture, piercing the paper. At the fourth shot, from 60 yards distance, the bowl of a pipe, which the son was smoking, was crushed. At the fifth shot a copper cent was thrown in the air and hit. The sixth and seventh shots were delivered at a blackened five cent nickel piece thrown up by the son, standing about thirty yards off.

At the first attempt the shot missed. The old gentleman showed considerable mortification, and laid the blame upon a bystander, who at the critical moment squeezed loudly. The next was an entire success. The old man declined any further trials of his skill, and when offered a sum of money to repeat his first feat of shooting a potato from his son's hand he refused, saying he didn't care to try such experiments unless his weapon was freshly cleaned.

The exhibition was the more remarkable from the fact that the marksman was an old man, at least fifty. His eye, however, is a clear, bright gray. His appearance is that of a poor farmer. The young man showed not the least tremor nor anxiety during the dangerous experiment upon himself. The old man, referring to his son, said, Bob can shoot just as well as I can. -Rich Whig.

THE GIRL WHO WINS.

The time has passed when woman must be pale and delicate to be interesting—when she must be totally ignorant of all practical knowledge, to be called refined and high bred—when she must know nothing of the current political news of the day, or be called masculine or strong-minded. It is not a sign of high birth or refinement to be sickly and ignorant. Those who affect anything of the kind are behind the times, and must shake up and air themselves mentally and physically, or drop under the firm strides of common sense ideas, and be crushed into utter insignificance.

In these days an active, rosy faced girl, with brain quick and clear, warm, light heart, a temper quickly heated at intended insults or injury, and just as quick to forgive; whose feet can run as fast as her tongue, and not put her out of breath; who is not afraid of freckles, or to breathe the pure air of heaven, unrestrained by the drawn curtains of a close carriage; and, above all, who can speak her mind, and give her opinion on important topics which interest intelligent people, is the true girl who will make a good woman. This is the girl who wins in these days. Even fops and dandies, who so strongly oppose woman's rights, like a woman that can talk well, even if she is not handsome.

Ladies will do well to read the Letters from the pen of a curious superstitious person, which are actually observed to the effect that twins, if allowed to be hungry, turn into cats at night and go out prowling for food, they only eat a little of your provisions, but if you beat them they will tell their parents next day, "So-and-so beat me in his house last night," and show their bruises. Only twins do it; and if you give them a sort of onion broth camel's milk the first thing when they are born, they don't do it at all. "One of the American missionaries," says the author, "told me something like it as belonging to the Copts, but it is entirely Egyptian and common to both religions. I asked several Copts, who assured me it was true, and told it just the same. Is it a remnant of the doctrine of transmigration? However, the notion fully accounts for the horror people feel at the idea of killing a cat."

CARRIED TOO FAR.

Denver, Colorado, gives an instance of a joke being carried too far. It was perpetrated years ago, but only lately came to light in public dress. After the Atlantic cable had been established a telegraph operator at Denver sent the following dispatch:

"To the Emperor Napoleon, Garden of the Tuileries, Paris, France: Governor Gilpin will not accede to the cession of Italy to France. Please let Bohemia alone."

The operator supposed it would make some fun in the Omaha office, and stop there, as the station agents have a general understanding in regard to each other's jokes. By some hook or crook the dispatch went on, and dived under the ocean and came up smiling in the Garden of Tuileries, in France. The manner of the reception by Napoleon has been lost to history. All that is known is, the Emperor did not pay for it, and the facetious operator was hunted up and was obliged to pay a bill of $187 50 in gold for his little joke. The operator was entirely satisfied with the result of Sedan.

BEECHER.

Mr. Beecher, it is said, has been engaged for a lecturing tour west of the Mississippi, some fifteen or twenty lectures to be delivered, and Mr. Beecher to be paid $5,000 for each of them, with his travelling expenses added. The great Plymouth pastor seems to have found a "big bouanza" in his scandal suit; and in the evening of his life he may enjoy the proceeds of his new notoriety, which makes him more an object of curiosity to the world than he has ever been, even in the best days of his fame as a popular pulpit speaker. -Richmond Whig.

They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator, an invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.
