

PHYSICIANS SYMPATHY.

It is told of the venerable Dr. G— probably the most eminent surgeon in this country, that while performing operations before his class in the Blockley hospital, a little girl was placed upon the table. The child was a pauper bearing in every feature the signs of want and poverty.

The operation required was amputation at the hip joint, one of the most difficult in surgery. She was brought under the influence of an anesthetic. The surgeon rapidly explained to the students the necessity of the operation, and the probability, that the poor baby would die under the knife.

He took the instruments, glanced down at the thin white face of the little creature whom the world had used so hardly, and then suddenly stooped and kissed her on the lips.

'Gentlemen, you will pardon me,' he said, with an unsteady voice; 'I am a father.'

The operation was successful, and the child, we are glad to say, did not die.

There is evidence that the most successful physicians have been those who, besides learning and skill, possess a great tenderness and quick sympathies. No profession, probably, requires the exercise of a higher sense of honor, or finer tact. Men are apt to show to their physician the skeletons in their homes, and the diseases of their mind, as well as the ailments of their bodies. There is, perhaps, no profession in which liberality is as constantly and secretly practiced.

Dr. H—, an eccentric, well known in the West a few years ago, was notorious for his enormous charges to the rich, and his lavish generosity to the poor. A penniless man who employed him was almost sure of a comfortable support for himself and his family as long as he was a patient.

A Methodist clergyman who had required a costly operation and long attendance raised five hundred dollars with difficulty, and then asked the surgeon for his bill, trembling lest the amount would not cover it. He expected no mercy, as the doctor was a notoriously profane man, and professed no love for the clergy; but the bill was handed to him recited.

'Did—did my parish?'—stammered the minister.

'No, no; paid it yourself. Want the items?' seizing a slip of paper and jotting down, 'Dr. H. to Rev. M. C.—, Dr. To one sermon, February 18th, $500. To one do., May 10th, $200. To one do., May 10th, $200. To one do., June 1st, not one cent.'

The poor minister was wont to tell the story with great zest for years afterward.—Youths Companion

A SOLDIER'S DEATH.

Private Fisher had remained through all his trials stout, fresh and hearty, interesting in appearance and so gentle-mannered and uncomplaining that we all loved him. Supported on his crutches he had walked up and down his ward for the first time since he was wounded and seemed almost restored. That same night he turned over and uttered an explanation of pain.

Following the nurse to his bed, and turning down the covering, a small jet of blood spurted up. The sharp edge of the splintered bone must have severed an artery. I instantly put my finger on the little orifice and waited the surgeon. He soon came—took a long look and snook his head. The explanation was easy; the artery was imbedded in the fleshy part of the thigh and could not be taken up. No earthly power could save him.

There was no object in detaining Dr. He required his time and his strength; and long I sat by the boy, unconscious himself that any serious trouble was apprehended. The hardest trial of my duty was laid upon me; the necessity of telling a man in the prime of life and fullness of strength that there was no hope for him.

It was done at last, and the verdict received patiently and courageously, some directions given by which his mother would be informed of his death, and then he turned his questioning eyes upon my face.

'How long can I live?'

'Only as long as I keep my finger upon this artery.' A pause ensued. God alone knew what thoughts ran through that heart and brain, called so unexpectedly from all earthly hopes and ties. He broke the silence at last:

'You can let go—'

'But I could not. Not if my own life had trebled in the balance. Hot tears rushed to my eyes, a surging sound in my ears, and a deathly coldness to my lips. The pang of obeying him was spared me, and for the first and last time during the trials that surrounded me for four years, I fainted away.'

A short time ago a Danbury man had forty dollars stolen from him. The thief was subsequently struck with remorse, and sent back twenty dollars, with a note to the effect that as soon as he received more remorse he would send back the rest.—Danbury News.

A ragged looking pedestrian came to the back door of the Dumbbucker mansion, and the hired shouted, 'We've nothing for tramps.' 'Fair lady, please,' said the visitor; 'I'm not a tramp nor beggar. What are ye then?' 'Madam, I'm a solicitor general.'

At the approaching celebration of the 1,000th anniversary of the destruction of Pompeii a bottle wine taken from the ruins, where it had lain since A. D. 79, is to be opened.

MARRIED DR. BUTTS

No. 128, Eighth St. St. Louis, Mo.

Who has had greater experience in the treatment of the sexual diseases of both male and female than any physician in the West, who has the records of his long and successful practice in his own hands, just published, entitled

THE PHYSIOLOGY OF MARRIAGE AND THE PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER

Books that are really unique and self-instructive in all matters pertaining to husband and wife, and which will supply want long felt. They are beautifully illustrated, and in plain and easily understood language. The books are bound in cloth, and contain valuable information for both married and single, with all the recent improvements in the treatment of the same. The knowledge imparted in the better new works is in no way of questionable character, but is something that every one should have. The work is the result of early indiscretion; the man otherwise perfectly healthy, but with weakness in the system of life, and the woman in many cases has many ill effects to her health.

Single Life

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.
