Owing to the limited supply of cotton in Germany the sand bags used in constructing breastworks are now being made of a specially prepared paper. Experience has proved that these new paper bags are much superior to cotton bags for durability and cost less. After cotton bags have been in use for some time they wear out from exposure and must be replaced. The paper bags which are n w being used have been scientifically prepared, are waterproof and may be used over and over again, being practically ndestructible. Millions of these bags are being used in place of the cotton ones, which means quite a saving both in cotton and cost.
