Candidate Hughes is digging away at the Adamson 8-hour bill, ning it with all his power. That is a thrust at a majority of the Republican Congressmed who voted for it, among whom was Joe Cannon. Congressman Britt, the only Republican in Congress from North Carolina, voted for it, and is standing by his record. LaFollette of Wisconsin and Cummins Iowa, two other Republicans of Presidential dimensions, are fighting back at Hughes for his opposition to the law. And the New York Herald, a strong opponent of the Wilson administration, says on deserves great credit for his stand in urging the passage of

gets. For what shall it profit a student if he shall learn all knowledge and forget what he learns? It is true that many things that a student learns he forgets, and he could not be expected to retain them, it is sometimes stated that he is not expected to be a walking encyclopedia. But how often the important, the should never be forgotten if learned at all, is lost with the learning. The core, the gist, the important of all books out of which we get things should be carefully and systematically written in the book in which we put things.

If we realize that we remember one-tenth of what we hear and five-tenths of what we write we will see at once the importance of keeping a book into which we put things. The advantage of keeping such a book is at least five to one. Furthermore to look for that which should be noted is to study as the student ought. And to write down in a book—a note book—what we have learned is to fix firmly and accurately in the mind what we have learned. In many schools, rural schools especially, too little written work is

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES

With the king and queen and al their pompous retinue, and the chief captains and principal men of the city captains and principal men of the city (xxv, 23), this was probably one of Paul's greatest opportunities to tell to earth's great ones the wondrous story of redeeming grace. Festus, having had Paul brought in before this great gathering, said to the king and all present that, although the Jews were demanding his life, he had not been able to find that he had committed anything worthy of death but that. able to find that he had committee anything worthy of death, but that having appealed to Caesar, he was go-ing to send him to Rome, though he could not signify any crime that he had been guilty of, but he hoped that after Agrippa had heard him and examined him he might have something definite to write. to write. The king, having given Paul permi sion to speak for himself, he began h

saying that he was happy to be per-mitted to state his case before the king because he knew him to be ex-pert in all customs and questions among the Jews. He therefore aske among the Jews. He therefore asked to be heard patiently (verses 1.3). With a word concerning his early life at Jerusalem and his being brought up a Pharisee and well known to all the Jews, he said that the accusation against him was that he had become follower of Jesus, risen from the dea and coming again to restore the king dom to Israel, according to all the promises made by God through the prophets to the fathers (verses 48) We hope to consider or refer to some of these later in this lesson. He ther confessed that, like the Jews who were now persecuting him, he had himself been also a persecutor of the followers of Jesus of Nazareth, under the au thority of the chief priests and a very cruel one, even going to distant citi to arrest them (verses 9-11). Then he told of his experience on the way to Damascus and of his commission from the risen and ascended Christ and othis subsequent obedience to this commission up to that day (verses 12-23). We may be sure that such an asset blage never heard such a testimony t fore, and we can only hope that son of those who heard became follower of Jesus as Paul prayed that they might (verse 29). Festus certainly heard more about the "One Jesus" (xxv, 19) than he knew before, but he had no use for such talk and told Pau that he was mad and beside him lowship with the Lord Jesus, for they said of Him. "He bath a devil and is mad; why hear ye Him?" (John x. 20.) Long ago it was said of the serv-ants of the Lord, "The prophet is a fool; the spiritual man is mad" (Hos ix, 7), and the wisdom of this world is still of the same mind.

It is possible that some in the assembly thought Paul to be more same than Festus, and it looks as if the king was nclined to that opinion (verse 28). The revised version reads, "With but little ersuasion thou would'st fain make ne a Christian," and Paul's heart wen me a Christian," and Paul's heart went out to God in great desire, that not only Agrippa, but all who heard him speak, might become Christians, or, as he put it, "almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds" (verse 29). The king and governor and others having gone aside to consuit, their decision was that Paul had done nothing J. S. Cook and R. worthy of death or of honds and that holders. worthy of death or of bonds, and that if he had not appealed unto Caesar he might have been set at liberty (verses 30-32). But with such fanatical Jews about, who were determined to kill nim, liberty would probably have meant death to him, and we know meant death to him, and we know from the Lord's night message that it was in the plan for him to go to Rome. Going back in our lesson to Paul's account of his commission by the Lord Jesus, at the time of his conversion.

what we have learned is to fix firmly and accurately in the mind what we have learned.

In many schools, rural schools especially, too little written work is done. And in many more too little carefully written work is done. We develop most by doing when we ao that thing which we best can. The keeping of a nice note book, the keeping of a note book in a shape to retain, has in the keeping a splendid training. In such keeping we call into use formulation, composition, capitalization and punctuation. "Writing makes an exact scholar,"—a quality that is so essential and yet wanting in So many. Accuracy and retention both plead for note book in school.

Note books are usually kept by college students but they should be kept by High School and Public School students as well. I believe every student in the fourth grade should start a note book for every subject he studies in the beginning of the session. I really believe that every student in all grades should have a note book. Certainly every public school course. And these should be a complete compendium of all that is most important and best in the course. The student by writing the important parts of the books he reads into his note book impresses these parts upon his mind with accuracy and makes an ever ready reference for himself of all that is biggest and best of what he has read. which is a little more full here than in the other two records, note the as-surance of deliverance from the people and from the gentiles (verses 16, 17), Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cure by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear, There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. DESPONDENCY.

When you feel discouraged and despondent, do not give up but take a dose of Chamberlain's Tablets and you are almost certain to feel all right within a day or two. Despondency is very often due to indigestion and biliousness, ior which these tablets are especially valuable. Obtainable everywhere.
