Mr. Freshwater Writes About the Camp and the Boys to Mr. Nicholson.

Graham, Aug. 10.—Among the young men who are answering their country's call for its defense against a foreign foe is one, among many others, whom I especially admire for his many sterling qualities.

The gentleman to whom I refer is Mr. W. R. Freshwater, who is well known throughout the county of Alamance. He was among the first to volunteer and join the Ambulance Corps of the Red Cross Society organized at Greensboro, N. C.

For the interest of his friends and others who have connections belonging to this Company, I submit for publication the following letter just received from him:

"Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., Amb. Co. No. 32. I have planned to write you for several days, but had to write to all my girl friends first, you know. So I am just getting down to work. We go to bed strictly at 9 o'clock, get up at first bugle call, which is at 5 o'clock, a. m., and you must be up or go to the mess house. We have breakfast at 6:30 a. m. This consists of coffee, rice, or grits, gravy, fried meat and stewed fruit.

We then go out at 7 and drill until 11 a. m. Come in for dinner at 12. This consists of navy beans, meat, Irish potatoes, dried peaches and tea. We then go out at 1 o'clock and drill until 4 o'clock, when we come in for supper, which consists of stew beef, potatoes and dried peaches, with water.

From five until nine at night we do our cleaning up and washing. You should see Murphy Nicholson and Clem Bradshaw washing their shirts. They are falling into it fine. We are all feeling good, though the weather has been awful hot. We have had about a dozen to fall out on drill field, though they afterwards got all right. This Fort is called "Soldiers City." There are about 75,000 here now, some coming in and some going out to don't know where, perhaps France. How long we will be here I don't know, at least two months I think.

Somehow I like the life. There is a fascination about it that I love, yet there are many of the boys that cry like kids. They joined for a good time, and they are not finding anything but hard work. It is not as bad as I thought it would be. We have an exceptionally good bunch of boys; they all hang together like brothers. I do not exaggerate in telling you that we have the nicest and most intelligent bunch of boys in the camp, and they are making a fine show of it.

I have been placed in the medical department and go to school two hours every night. I like it fine. We have a good Captain and he is good to every one of the boys.

You have never seen so much building going on. The Government is working 600 German prisoners building mess houses and other quarters. I would guess there are at least 1,500 carpenters working here. The fort is about 15 miles square and literally covered in houses. I am sitting out on the street writing this letter by a very dim light. Don't know whether you can read it or not.

Drop me a line when you have time. Very sincerely, W. R. FRESHWATER."

There is one thing about this war that is to be regretted. Only those who stand on a higher plain than dirty partisan politics can see it. Some writers for the press insist that only Republicans resist the draft system. No sane person believes it. Every intelligent man or woman knows that the Republican party has ever, and will ever and always stand by the "Stars and Stripes"—the greatest flag that floats in the breeze. When our first battle is fought on the front, afterwards, in gathering up the dead and wounded you will find the patriotic soldiers, both Democrat and Republican, dressed alike in the same colored drab suit lying side by side. Both have done their duty, both have done all that mortal can do—given their life for their country. Posterity will be generous and will give to each alike the plaudits and honors due to heroes.

Very truly, A. B. NICHOLSON.

SEPTEMBER COSMOPOLITAN.

Of course Robert W. Chambers' newest and best novel, "The Restless Sex," is the big feature of the new Cosmopolitan, now on sale.

Next to that comes a story by Fannie Hurst, "Get Ready to Weath'ers," this popular writer's masterpiece up to date. There is a tear and a smile in almost every line.

Gouverneur Morris is there with tales of terror and romance, entitled "The Purple Flank." This writer appears again after a long interval. His new story is a thriller.

The more Driser makes his appearance in September Cosmopolitan, every reader will feel a sympathetic understanding with Marjorie and Duer as they endeavor to adjust themselves to their new relation and environment.

Blue Aloysius by Cynthia Stockley, is continued. This is a thrilling mystery story of South Africa, land of adventure and romance. Read the synopsis of the first installment and be sure to finish this remarkable narrative.

Herbert Kaufman writes about the Morgans, father and son. The personalities of these colorful figures of finance are depicted in Kaufman's wonderful picturesque parapsychology.

The "Adventure of Jose," the girl in search of a husband. A motorist's romance of rare entertainment. Read the synopsis of the first installment and be sure to finish this remarkable narrative.
