Graham High School Debaters at Greensboro Tonight. Two of Graham High School's debaters, who were successful in the triangular debate and went to Chapel Hill to contest for places on the final debate for the Aycock Cup, will go to Greensboro tonight.

Referring to the proposed debate the Greensboro Daily Record had the following yesterday: "The people of Greensboro who were interested in the triangular debates about a month ago will be delighted to know they will have the opportunity of hearing two of the best teams in the State fight out the question again."

Mr. Archer, who is so much interested in debating, wishes the people of Greensboro to hear the negative team of the high school. This team in the triangular contest won unanimously from Charlotte. The Graham high school has one of the strongest teams in the State. On hearing of the strength of the Graham team Mr. Archer arranged a contest between the two teams.

"The young ladies from Graham will arrive tomorrow and the debate will take place in the high school auditorium tomorrow night at 8:30. Misses Eunice Rich and Enita Nicks will uphold the affirmative for Graham, while Misses May Belle Penn and Clara Gant will represent the local high school.

"This is the first year that the high school has allowed girls to compete for the triangular contest, and this is the first year that the high school was represented at Chapel Hill.

Liberty Loan Rally.

Burlington and Graham Join Hands in Big Demonstration.

FLOATS AND AUTOMOBILES BY THE MILE.

Last Saturday witnessed one of the most spectacular occasions ever held in Alamance county.

The procession from Burlington started at 2:30 p. m. It was composed of more than a half hundred floats, trucks and automobiles elaborately decorated in patriotic colors and the Boy Scouts of that city.

A procession composed of Graham citizens and Graham Boy Scouts met the Burlington procession and escorted them to the court house square, around which were about 50 handsomely decorated automobiles and hundreds of citizens in waiting.

From an improvised platform Mr. Lynn B. Williamson, County Chairman of Council of National Defense, addressed the throng, telling what Alamance county and Graham had done in subscriptions for Liberty Bonds and presented both the county and town flags.

Mr. J. Dolph Long made the speech of acceptance in happy style. These exercises concluded, the procession started for Burlington, composed of those who came from there along with the numerous automobiles and trucks which had gathered in Graham.

In Burlington the people congregated at the intersection of Main and Davis streets, and these streets were full of people for a block or more back in all directions.

Mr. E. S. Parker, Jr., made the speech of the occasion and with fervid zeal told of the beautiful outrages of the Kaiser and his cohorts and urged the people to buy Liberty Bonds, the best securities in the world, backed by all the lands and every material thing, and all the brown and muscle in the vast domain of the United States of America.

Mr. E. S. W. Dameron responded and told how thankful they were in having secured more than their quota and said they were going to add some stars. Rev. John Benner Gibble pronounced the benediction and the multitude dispersed.

Tractor Demonstration in Graham, Monday, May 6th. A plowing demonstration with a Knickerbocker Form-Tractor will be given in Graham next Monday, May 6th.

Every farmer in Alamance county and everyone else interested is invited to be present. This machine is guaranteed to do certain work, operated according to directions, at greatly less cost than the work can otherwise be done.

Attendance of Red Cross Members and Their Work. The following ladies were present in the Red Cross work room last Friday night: Mrs. J. H. Goley, Mrs. J. Elmer Long, Mrs. J. Ernest Thompson, Mrs. H. W. Scott, Mrs. J. W. Menefee, Mrs. J. K. Mebane, Mrs. C. H. Phillips, Mrs. J. Harvey White, Mrs. Edwin D. Scott, Mrs. J. D. Korndle, Mrs. W. T. Ezell, Miss Ida Scott, Miss Eleanor Williamson.

One visitor, Miss Dorothy Brigham. These were busy making and filling comfort bags, 19 of which were given to the contingent of colored boys who left for Camp Sevier Saturday morning, and 25 to the contingent of colored boys leaving Tuesday.

A few suits of pajamas were made, new outfits for this work having been received.

At 5 o'clock Friday afternoon a short meeting of the Red Cross executive committee was held in the work room to discuss plans for the coming Red Cross drive.

Last Friday night and again Monday night a committee of colored boys leaving last Saturday and Tuesday.

Protection From Late Frosts. Sometimes plants are large enough to set out before conditions are just right for them.

The first thing to do with plants that have grown as large as you want them is to get them into the open air. Keep them where they can be protected from frost, but where they can get full sun and air.

Give just enough water to keep the soil from drying out.

GROW YOUR OWN VEGETABLES.

How To Plant and Cultivate Your Home Garden to Get the Greatest Returns and the Surest Results.

By F. F. ROCKWELL, Author of "Around the Year in the Garden," "Home Vegetable Gardening," "Gardener's Pocket Guide," Etc., Etc.

FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR—PRODUCE IT! Article No. 6.—Setting Out Plants—Protection From Late Frosts—Getting an Early Start With the Tender Crops.

Water thoroughly, however, the day before planting, so that the soil and roots will be in the right condition.

Occasionally during March, April and early May, in the northern States the gardener who is trying to be early will have a close call from frost.

Where there are indications of a dew fall and the thermometer drops rapidly late in the day, and the air is still, and the sky is clear, the gardener's safe course is to cover the plants.

Those in the cold-farms, if covered even with cloth sash, will be protected from several degrees of frost. Blankets, and old bags and burlap supported above the plants on a few short sticks will answer the same purpose.

For plants that have already been set out other means will be necessary. One of the most effective modes of covering such early things as potatoes and peas is to run the wheel hoe with the hilling attachment along the row and hill up the earth over the plants.

Also, you will find it well to save a supply of newspapers, with which in a few minutes you can cover up a hundred or two hundred plants or hills of such things as pole beans, tomatoes, melons or squash; put several thicknesses of newspapers over each, and hold the edges down with a few trowelfuls of dirt.

Inverted tomato cans or flower pots may be used to protect individual plants.

If, in spite of your precautions, some of your plants get nipped they should be protected from the sun the next morning and watered as early as possible with very cold water. This may form a very thin coating of ice on the leaves, but it will serve to get the frost out gradually, which lessens the damage.

Instead of temporary frost protection of this kind, however, much better and earlier results are to be had by permanent plant protectors, of which there are numerous kinds to be bought or made. One of the simplest is the plain forcing hill, which is nothing but a pane of glass on top of a bank of soil about the hill or plant. In many soils, however, this cannot be successfully accomplished; and it is always somewhat of a makeshift method, open to the objection that the hollowed hills collect water when it rains, and are too low for most purposes.

One of the various types of individual protectors to be bought can be used to great advantage, particularly when only a few are required. With care they will last a great many years, so that the cost is by no means prohibitive.

Two inexpensive and practical forcing frames adapted to such tall plants as tomatoes may be saved from an ordinary cracker box, with glass about thirteen by twenty-two inches fitted in one side. For melons, etc., they may be made flat.

Getting an Early Start With the Tender Crops—Start Tender Things in Paper Pots.

If you have a cold-frame or a hot-bed by far the surest and in the end the easiest way to start all the vine crops—cucumbers, melons, squashes, and also pole beans and lima beans, and even extra early sweet corn—is to make use of paper pots or dirt bands, which are very cheap. Fill these with a rich compost containing plenty of humus, one-third of crumby manure and two-thirds garden loam, with a little sand if the loam is heavy. Plant about twice as many seeds as you want plants, and thin them as soon as they are well started. It is best to water thoroughly some hours before planting. The pots used for lima beans should be watered at least a day in advance and the beans should be pushed in eye down. No more water should be applied until they are well up, or they will be almost sure to rot. All these things will sprout and grow with great rapidity in the frame. Two to four weeks is ample time to give them, as they do not transplant well if allowed to get too big. Thin out the plants in each pot to the number you want before they get too large, or the roots and tops will begin to crowd each other.

Here are a few suggestions for individual crops: Beans—For the first planting use the lightest, best-drained soil. If the weather is still a little wet and cold plant rather shallow—only an inch or so deep. In dry weather plant about two inches deep. Always plant lima beans, whether pole or bush, eye down, and when there is no immediate prospect of rain. Plant the pole sorts in hills.

Corn—In the home garden there is little advantage in planting in hills, unless the ground is weedy or heavy. As good results may be had by planting thinly in a continuous drill, thin the plants to about a foot apart in the row. This gives the individual plants a better chance for development than they get when they are bunched three or four in a hill.

Egg-Plants—Do not set out until all danger of frost is past. Keep well protected from potato bugs. Give plenty of rich compost in the hills.

Okra—Start under glass; or plant in rich soil in hills and thin to a single plant.

Peppers—Do not plant until thoroughly warm weather is established and then put them in the sunniest position available.

Enrich the hills well, but avoid green manure. Early varieties are the safest in Northern sections.

Tomatoes—Get your plants as big and as strong as possible by shifting to paper pots during the last three weeks before setting out, so that they may have blossoms, or even small fruits before they go into the garden. As soon as they are set out, stake them to prevent whipping by the wind. Keep trained up from the beginning and cut off most of the side suckers as soon as they form.
