DON'T MISTAKE THE CAUSE.

Many Graham People Have Kidney Trouble and Do Not Know It.

Do you have backache? Are you tired and worn out? Feel dizzy, nervous and depressed?

Are the kidney secretions irregular? Highly colored, contain sediment? Likely your kidneys are at fault.

Weak kidneys give warning of distress. Heed the warning: don't delay—Use a tested kidney remedy.

Read this Burlington testimony. John W. King, near Fair Grounds, Burlington, N. C., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for several years, when my back caused me pain and misery and have always found them to be all right and safe for them. Sometimes my back gets so stiff and lame that I can hardly straighten up after stooping. Doan's Kidney Pills never failed to fit me in good shape."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same Mrs. King has twice publicly recommended. Foster-McLburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SUGAR USE EXPLAINED.

Some Misunderstandings Cleared Up by County Food Administrator.

Inquiries to County Food Administrator Lynn B. Williamson, indicate that a number of good housewives do not thoroughly understand the regulations governing the use of sugar for canning and preserving purposes, and some have thought they would be compelled to abandon further canning and preserving. They have been under the impression that only 25 pounds for each household was available for this purpose.

"It is the very earnest desire of the Food Administrator that the largest possible quantity of fruit be saved through canning, preserving, drying or evaporation," today declared Mr. Lynn Williamson to a Gleaner reporter.

"Naturally in the face of a sugar shortage there is a remarkable increase in the drying and evaporating of fruits. Also the Food Administration is urging as its motto, 'Maximum canning with minimum sugar,' and Mrs. Jane S. McKinnon, head of home demonstration work in North Carolina, recommends the use of only one pound for 16 quarts of fruit. If additional sugar is necessary it can be added when the fruit is eaten. At that time the sugar situation will no doubt be much easier.

"No household is allowed to have more than 25 pounds of sugar during the season for canning and preserving except with the approval of their County Food Administrator. However, all county food administrators have been instructed by Food Administrator Henry A. Page to be very liberal in the exercise of the discretion that is given them in this matter and there is no reason why anyone with fruit or berries available should not save them all by canning, preserving and drying. The purchase of 25 pounds or a smaller quantity for this purpose can be repeated as often as there is real and legitimate need for their purpose.

"Individuals canning for the market should immediately make statements to the Sugar Division of the Food Administration at Raleigh for certificates upon which to buy sugar for canning and preserving. They will be allowed the full quantity necessary. Statements upon which these certificates may be secured can be secured at my office. They must be filed with the Sugar Division at Raleigh by July 15 or they will not be effective."

GROW YOUR OWN VEGETABLES.

FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR—PRODUCE IT!

Article No. 17—Carrying the Garden Through Dry Weather Watering, Mulching and Modern Irrigation for Small Gardens.

(Copyrighted by W. Atlas Burpee Co., Seed Growers, Phila.)

In nine years out of ten the amount of vegetables which might be grown in the average small garden is cut down more by dry weather than by all the insects and plant diseases likely to attack them, put together.

The only reason why this fact is not more generally recognized is, that the injury done to a single plant either by insects or disease is at once discernible, while the injury done by dry weather in slowing up and finally taking the growth of plants is widespread and insidious, and it is very difficult to realize how much the garden is being injured unless it can be compared with some other plot where similar vegetables are being grown and have had an abundance of water.

One of the most serious of the gardener's mid-summer problems, therefore, is how to combat the influences of dry weather.

Two Things To Do.

There are in brief only two things which can be done to effect the ill attacks of the inevitable "dry spell." The first is to hold all the moisture possible in the soil, and the second is to add more water to the soil.

The first step for carrying the garden through dry weather, however, is of course to save what moisture there may be already in the soil. We may do the mulching with the soil itself by creating a "dirt mulch," or by putting some other material on the surface of the soil so that it will be protected from the sun and kept cool and moist.

The making of "dirt mulch" is a simple matter—it is merely to stir the soil frequently enough so that there will never be an opportunity for it to form a hard crust. By the time that it gets really dry the weeds in the well cared for garden should be pretty much under control. The inexperienced gardener is likely to take this as a cue for letting up on his cultivating. He must learn to realize that to bring his garden through to success it is just as necessary for him to cultivate clean bare soil during the latter part of the season as to cultivate weedy soil early in the season, but he need not work quite as hard doing it. With a wheel-hoe or a slide or scuffle-hoe made for the purpose he can cultivate the soil between the rows in his garden almost as fast as he can walk. It does not therefore involve a great deal of work to get over the garden every week or ten days.

Cultivating to create a "dust mulch" should of course be done in such a manner that the soil is left level and as finely pulverized as possible. The cultivation should not be deep, because by this time the plant roots are pretty well developed and deep cultivating will break them off and injure instead of helping the amount of moisture supplied to the plant.

If the soil is stirred from an inch and a half to two inches and a half deep—the latter for the larger growing vegetables such as potatoes, corn, etc.—that will be sufficient.

Mulching With Manure, Lawn Clippings, Etc.

While a soil mulch such as described above is effective, the use of old manure, clippings from the lawn, decayed leaves, compost, any light material which will admit the air and rain readily without packing down hard—is even more effective. These materials may be used in the flower beds and borders or around small fruits and in other places where it is not easy to cultivate the soil regularly. A mulching of this kind is also particularly valuable for cauliflower, egg-plant, celery, lettuce and other plants which require a great abundance of moisture. This is a very good way of making use of such manure and compost as may be accumulated after the garden is prepared for planting in the spring, because it not only mulches the soil and keeps it moist, but the plant food contained in it will be washed down into the soil within reach of the roots.

Irrigation For The Small Garden.

While watering with a hose or sprinkling can is better than no watering at all it cannot be depended upon to save a garden of any size at all in really dry weather. Up to a few years ago the problem of watering the small garden was a general problem for which there was no general solution. With the development of overhead or spray irrigation, however, any gardener who cares to save his products to have absolute insurance against drought may do so by investing a few dol-
