

Little grains of dandruff mean good-by to Hair

WILDROOT THE GUARANTEED HAIR TONIC

For sale here under a money-back guarantee

Graham Drug Co. Hayes Drug Co.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS

JOHN J. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
GRAHAM, N. C.
Office over National Bank of Amalance

J. S. COOK
Attorney-at-Law
GRAHAM, N. C.
Office Patterson Building
Second Floor

DR. WILL S. LONG, JR.
DENTIST
Graham - North Carolina
OFFICE IN SIMMONS BUILDING

JACOB A. LONG, J. ELMER LONG
LONG & LONG,
Attorneys and Counselors at Law
GRAHAM, N. C.

Jas. H. Rich W. Ernest Thompson
Rich & Thompson
Funeral Directors and Embalmers
MOTOR AND HORSE DRAWN HEARSE
Calls answered anywhere day or night
Day Phone No. 86W
Night Phones
W. Ernest Thompson 2502
Jas. H. Rich 546-W

DR. WILL S. LONG, JR.
DENTIST
Graham - North Carolina
OFFICE IN SIMMONS BUILDING

JACOB A. LONG, J. ELMER LONG
LONG & LONG,
Attorneys and Counselors at Law
GRAHAM, N. C.

Sick Stomach? Get a NEW ONE!

"DIGESTINE" Nature's Restorative, still life. Not only gives quick relief from indigestion, heartburn, dizziness, sour stomach, acid stomach, flatulence, etc., but builds up appetite and enters system. Thousands KNOW. Follow their lead.

USE DIGESTINE
"The Key to Relief"

I am improving in health since I have been taking your medicine. It has helped me so much. I can't tell you how much I am enjoying it. I don't think I could get along without it. It has done me so much good.

WILLIS TOWN, Mason, N. C.
Distributors addressees your money BACK
For further convincing FACTS, see
HAYES DRUG COMPANY, GRAHAM, N. C.

BLANK BOOKS

Journals, Ledgers, Day Books, Time Books, Counter Books, Tally Books, Order Books, Large Books, Small Books, Pocket Memo., Vest Pocket Memo., &c., &c.

For Sale At
The Gleaner Printing Office Graham, N. C.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the signature of Dr. J. C. Watson

ANNUAL MESSAGE TO THE CONGRESS

SUBJECTS CHIEFLY TOUCHED UPON ARE COST OF LIVING AND LABOR UNREST.

MESSAGE LATER ON TREATY

Readjustment of Tariff System if Necessary; Recognition and Relief of Soldiers of World War.

Washington.—General recommendations on legislation to combat the cost of living, labor unrest, radicalism and readjustment of nation to peace time basis were the features of President Wilson's annual message to congress.

The peace treaty, the President told congress, will be discussed in a separate message later, as will the railroad question.

For the second time only, since the President established the practice of addressing congress in person, his message was read by the clerks.

"The establishment of the principles regarding labor, laid down in the covenant of the league of nations," said the message, "offers us the way to industrial peace and conciliation. No other road lies open to us." Government must recognize the right of men to bargain collectively for humane objects. "Labor must no longer be treated as a commodity."

"The right of individuals to strike is inalienable," continued the message, "and ought not to be interfered with by any process of government, but there is a predominant right and that is the right of the government to protect all of its people and to assert its power and authority against the challenge of any class."

The President was referring to the government's recent injunction against the coal strike.

The message closed with a pointed reference to radicalism and red doctrines, and referred to "Russia today with its blood and terror" as a "painful object lesson of the power of minorities."

"There are those in this country," said the President, "who threaten direct action to force their will upon a majority. * * * It makes little difference what minority it is; whether capital or labor, or any other class; no sort of privilege will ever be permitted to dominate this country."

Orderly processes, the message declared, were the only ones by which relief and reform should be obtained.

"Those who would propose any other method of reform are enemies of this country," the message said, "and let them beware who take the shorter road of disorder and revolution."

The text of the President's message follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I sincerely regret that I cannot be present at the opening of this session of the congress. I am thus prevented from presenting in as direct a way as I could wish the many questions that are pressing for solution at this time. Happily, I have had the advantage of the advice of the heads of the several executive departments, who have kept in close touch with affairs in their detail and whose thoughtful recommendations I earnestly second.

In the matter of the railroads and the readjustment of their affairs growing out of federal control, I shall take the liberty at a later date of addressing you.

I hope that congress will bring to a conclusion at this session legislation looking to the establishment of a budget system. That there should be one single authority responsible for the making of all appropriations and that appropriations should be divided not independently of each other, but with reference to one single comprehensive plan of expenditure properly related to the nation's income, there can be no doubt. I believe the burden of preparing the budget must, in the nature of the case, if the work is to be properly done and responsibility concentrated instead of divided, rest upon the executive. The budget so prepared should be submitted to and approved or amended by a single committee of each house of congress and no single appropriation should be made by the congress, except such as may have been included in the budget prepared by the executive or added by the particular committee of congress charged with the budget legislation.

Another and not less important aspect of the problem is the ascertainment of the economy and efficiency with which the moneys appropriated are expended. Under existing law the only audit is for the purpose of ascertaining whether expenditures have been lawfully made under the appropriations. No one is authorized or equipped to ascertain whether the money has been spent wisely, economically and effectively. The auditors should be highly trained officials with permanent tenure in the treasury department, free from obligations or motives of consideration for this or subsequent administration, and authorized and empowered to examine into and make report upon the methods employed and the results obtained by the executive departments of the government. Their reports should be made to the congress and to the secretary of the treasury.

I trust that the congress will give its immediate consideration to the problem of future taxation. Simplification of the income and profits taxes has become an immediate necessity. These taxes performed indispensable service during the war. They must, however, be simplified, not only to save the taxpayer inconvenience and expense, but certain and definite.

With reference to the details of the revenue law, the secretary of the treasury and the commissioner of internal revenue will lay before you for your consideration certain amendments necessary or desirable in connection with the administration of the law—recommendations which have my approval and support. It is of the utmost importance that in dealing with this matter the present law should not be disturbed, for, as regards taxes for the calendar year 1920, payable in the calendar year 1921. The congress might well consider whether the higher rates of income and profits can in peace times be effectively productive of revenue and whether they may not, on the contrary, be destructive of business activity and productive of waste and inefficiency. There is a point at which in peace times, high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprises, encourage extravagant expenditures and produce industrial stagnation with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.

The problem is not an easy one. A fundamental change has taken place with reference to the position of America in the world's affairs. The prejudice and passions engendered decades of controversy between two schools of political and economic thought—the one believers in protection of American industries, the other believers in free trade for revenue only—must be subordinated to the single consideration of the public interest in the light of utterly changed conditions.

Before the war America was heavily the debtor of the rest of the world and the interest payments she had to make to foreign countries of American securities held abroad, the expenditures of American travelers abroad, and the ocean freight charges she had to pay to others, about balanced the value of her pre-war favorable balance of trade. During the war America's exports have been greatly stimulated, and increased prices have increased their value. On the other hand, she has purchased a large proportion of the American securities previously held abroad, loaned some $9,000,000,000 to foreign governments, and has built her own ships. Our favorable balance of trade has thus been greatly increased, Europe has been deprived of the means for meeting its heretofore existing. Europe can now pay her debts in three ways: through the favorable balance of trade, through peace times; by imports into this country of gold or of goods, or by establishing new credits. Europe is in no position at the present time to ship gold to us, nor could we contemplate large further imports of gold into this country without concern. The time has nearly passed for international governmental loans, and it will take time to develop in this country a market for foreign securities. Anything, therefore, which would tend to prevent foreign countries from settling for our exports by shipments of goods into this country could only have the effect of preventing them from paying for our exports from being made. The productivity of the country greatly stimulated by the war must find an outlet by exports to foreign countries, and any measure tending to prevent imports will inevitably curtail exports, force curtailment of production, load the banking machinery of our country with credits to carry unproductive and produce industrial stagnation and unemployment. If we want to sell we must be prepared to buy. Whatever, therefore, may have been our views during the period of growth of American business concerning tariff legislation, we must now adjust our own economic lives to a changed condition growing out of the fact that the American business is full grown and that America is the greatest capitalist in the world.

No policy of isolation will satisfy the growing needs and opportunities of America. The provincial standards and policies of the past, which have held American business as if in a straight jacket, must yield and give way to the needs and exigencies of the new day in which we live, a day full of hope and promise for American business. If we will but take advantage of the opportunities that are ours for the asking. The recent war has ended our great isolation and thrown upon us a great duty and responsibility. The United States must share the expanding world market. The United States desires for itself only equal opportunity with the other nations of the world, and that through the process of friendly co-operation and fair competition the legitimate interests of the nations concerned may be successfully and equitably adjusted.

There are other matters of importance upon which I urged action at the last session of congress, but I am still pressing for solution. I am sure it is not necessary for me again to remind you that there is one immediate and very practical question resulting from the war which we should meet in the most liberal spirit. It is a matter of recognition and relief to our soldiers. I can do no better than to quote from my last message urging this very action:

"We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of the country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the admirable organization created by the department of labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by creating new opportunities for individual enterprise.

The secretary of the interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the federal government has already prepared or can readily prepare for cultivation and also on many of the cut-over or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older states; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plan shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the congress."

In the matter of tariff legislation, I beg to call your attention to the statements contained in my last message urging legislation with reference to the establishment of the chemical and dyestuffs industry in America.

"Among the industries to which special attention should be given is that of the manufacture of dyestuffs and related chemicals. Our complete dependence upon German supplies before the war made the interruption of trade a cause of exceptional economic disturbance. The close relation between the manufacture of dyestuffs, on the one hand, and of explosives, and poisonous gases, on the other, moreover, has given the industry an exceptional significance and value. Although the United States will gladly and unhesitatingly join in the program of international disarmament, it will, nevertheless be a policy of obvious prudence to maintain a strong and successful maintenance of our own well-equipped chemical plants. The German chemical industry, with which we will be brought into competition, was and may well be again, a thoroughly knit monopoly capable of exercising a competition of a peculiarly insidious and dangerous kind."

During the war the former performance of the industry was so great that by materially increasing the production of its products, it supplied America and the allies with the increased amounts of food necessary to keep their immense armies in the field. He indispensibly helped to win the war. But there is now scarcely less need of increasing the production of these products than ever before. I ask the congress to consider means of encouraging efforts along these lines. The importance of doing everything possible to promote the production along economical lines, to improve marketing and to make rural life more attractive and healthful, is obvious. I would urge approval of plans already proposed to the congress by the secretary of agriculture to secure the essential facts required for the proper study of this question, through the proposed enlarged program for farm management studies and crop estimates. I would urge also the continuation of the federal participation in the building of rural roads, under the terms of existing laws and under the direction of present agencies; and the need of further action on the part of the states and the federal government to preserve and develop our forest resources, especially through the practice of better forestry methods on private lands, and the extension of publicly owned forests; better support for country schools and the more definite direction of their courses of study along lines related to rural problems; and fuller provision for sanitation in rural districts and the building up of needed hospitals and health facilities in these localities. Perhaps the most important cleared way for many of these desirable reforms by a fresh comprehensive survey made of rural conditions by a conference composed of representatives of the farmers and of the agricultural agencies responsible for leadership.

I would call your attention to the widespread condony of political selfishness in our body politic. The causes of this unrest, while various and complicated, are superficial rather than deep-seated. Broadly, they arise from or are connected with the failure on the part of our government to arrive speedily at a just and permanent policy permitting return to normal conditions from the political theories of radical theories from seething European centers pending such delay, from heartless profiteering resulting in the increase of the cost of living and lastly, from the machinations of passionate and malevolent agitators. With the return to normal conditions, the unrest will rapidly disappear. In the meantime, it does much evil. It seems to me that in dealing with this situation congress should not be impatient or drastic, but should seek rather to remove the causes. It should endeavor to bring our country back speedily to a peace footing, with ameliorated living conditions, and the minimum restrictions upon personal liberty that is consistent with our reconstruction problems. And it should arm the federal government with power to deal in its criminal courts with those persons who, by violent methods would abrogate our time-tested institutions.

With the free expression of opinion and with the advocacy of orderly political change, however fundamental, there must be no interference, but towards passion and malevolence tending to incite crime and insurrection under guise of political evolution there should be no leniency. Legislation to this end has been recommended by the attorney general and should be enacted. In this direct connection with your attention to my recommendations on August 3 pointing out legislative measures which would be effective in controlling and bringing down the present cost of living, which contributes so largely to this unrest. On only one of these recommendations has the congress acted. If the government's campaign is to be effective, it is necessary that the other steps suggested should be acted on at once.

I renew and strongly urge the necessity of the extension of the present food control act as to the period of time in which it shall remain in operation. The attorney general has submitted a bill providing for an extension of this act for a period of six months. As it now stands it has been in operation for the period of six months, and has been inoperative upon the proclamation of peace. It is imperative that it should be extended at once. The department of justice has built up extensive machinery for the purpose of enforcing its provisions; all of which must be abandoned upon the conclusion of peace unless the provisions of this act are extended.

During this period the congress will have the opportunity to make similar permanent provisions and regulations to all goods destined for interstate commerce and to exclude them from interstate shipment, if the requirements of the law are not complied with. Some such regulation is imperatively necessary. The abuses that have grown up in the manipulation of prices by the withholding of foodstuffs and other necessities of life cannot otherwise be effectively prevented. To analyze the particulars in the demands of labor is to admit the justice of their complaint in many matters that lie at their basis. The workman demands an adequate wage, sufficient to permit him to live in comfort, unhampered by the fear of poverty and want in his old age. He demands the right to live and the right to work amidst sanitary surroundings, both in home and in the workshop, surroundings that develop and do not retard his own health and well-being; and the right to provide for his children's wants in the matter of health and education. In other words, it is his desire to make the conditions of his life and the lives of those dear to him tolerable and easy to bear.

The establishment of the principles regarding labor laid down in the covenant of the league of nations offers us the way to industrial peace and conciliation. No other road lies open to us. Not to pursue this one is longer to invite enmities, bitterness and antagonisms which in the end only lead to industrial and social disaster. The unwilling workman is not a profitable servant. An employee whose life is hedged about by hard and unjust conditions, which he has no control, lacks that fine spirit of enthusiasm and volunteer effort which are the necessary ingredients of greater productivity. Let us be frank about this so-called matter. The evidences of world-wide unrest which manifest themselves in violence throughout the world bid us pause and consider the means to be found to stop the spread of this contagious thing before it saps the very vitality of the nation itself. Do we gain strength by withholding the remedy? Or is it not the business of statesmen to treat these manifestations of unrest which meet us on every hand as evidences of an economic disorder and to apply constructive remedies wherever necessary, being sure that in the application of the remedy we touch not the vital tissues of our industrial and economic life? There can be no recession of the tide of unrest until constructive instrumentalities are set up to stem that tide.

Government must recognize the right of men collectively to bargain for humane objects that have at their base the mutual protection and welfare of those engaged in all industries. Labor must no longer be treated as a commodity. It must be regarded as the activity of human beings possessed of deep yearnings and desires. The business man gives his best thought to the repair and replenishment of his machinery, so that its usefulness will not be impaired and its power to produce may always be at its height and kept in full vigor and motion. No less regard ought to be paid to the human machinery, which after all propels the machinery of the world and is the great dynamic force that lies back of all industry and progress. Return to the old standards of wage and industry in employment is unthinkable. The terrible tragedy of war which has just ended and which has brought the world to the verge of chaos and disaster would be in vain if there should ensue a return to the conditions of the past. Europe itself, whence has come the unrest which now holds the world at bay, is an example of standstill in these vital human matters which America might well accept as an example, not to be followed but studiously to be avoided. Europe made labor the differential, and the price of it all is enmity and antagonism and protracted industry. The right of labor to live in peace and comfort must be recognized by governments and America should be the first to lay the foundation stones upon which industrial peace shall be built.

Labor not only is entitled to an adequate wage, but capital should receive a reasonable return upon its investment and is entitled to protection at the hands of the government in every emergency. No government worthy of the name can "play" these elements against each other, for there is a mutual interest between them which the government must seek to express and safeguard at all costs.

The right of the individual to strike is inviolate and ought not to be interfered with by any process of government, but there is a predominant right and that is the right of the government to protect all of its people and to assert its power and majesty against the challenge of any class. The government, when it asserts that right, seeks not to antagonize a class, but simply to defend the right of a whole people against irreparable harm and injury that might be done by the attempt by any class to usurp a power that only government itself has a right to exercise as protection to all.

In the matter of international disputes which have led to war, statesmen have sought to set up as a remedy arbitration for war. Does this not point the way for the settlement of industrial disputes, by the establishment of a tribunal, fair and just alike to all, which will settle industrial disputes which in the past have led to war and disaster? America, witnessing the evil consequences which have followed out of such disputes between these contending forces, must not admit itself impotent to deal with these matters by means of peaceful processes. Surely, there must be some method of bringing together in a council of peace and amity these two great interests out of which will come a happier day of peace and co-operation, a day that will make men more hopeful and enthusiastic in their various tasks, that will make for more contentment and happiness in living and a more tolerable condition among all classes of men. Certainly human intelligence can devise some acceptable tribunal for adjusting the differences between capital and labor.

This is the hour of test and trial for America. By her prowess and strength, and the indomitable courage of her soldiers, she demonstrated her power to vindicate on foreign battlefields her conceptions of liberty and justice. Let not her influence as a mediator between capital and labor be weakened and her own failure to settle matters of purely domestic concern be proclaimed to the world. That she should in this country who threaten direct action to force their will upon a majority, Russia today with its blood and terror, is a painful object lesson of the power of minorities. It makes little difference what minority it is; whether capital or labor, or any other class; no sort of privilege will ever be permitted to dominate this country. We are a democracy; where the majority are the masters, or all the hopes and purposes of the men who founded this government have been defeated and forgotten. In America there is but one way by which great reforms can be accomplished and that is through the orderly processes of representative government. Those who would propose any other method of reform are enemies of this country. America will not be daunted by threats nor lose her composure or calmness in these distressing times. We can afford, in the midst of this day of passion and unrest, to be self-contained and serene. The instrument of all reform in America is the ballot. The road to economic and social reform in America is the straight road of justice to all classes and conditions of men. Men have but to follow this road to realize the full fruition of their objects and purposes. Let those beware who would take the shorter road of disorder and revolution. The right road is the road of justice and orderly process.

This is Better Than Laxatives

One NR Tablet Each Eight For A Week Will Restore Your Constipation and Make Comfortable Dealing Unnecessary. Try It.

Poor digestion and assimilation lead to a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Fermentation, putrefaction and the formation of noxious gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive liver, bilious attacks, location, nervousness, poor appetite, impoverished blood, salivary complications, flatulency, indigestion, and often times serious ailments.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics—salo, oil, calomel and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but their lasting benefit can only come through use of medicine that tones up and strengthens the digestive as well as the eliminative organs.

Get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one tablet each night for a week. Relief will follow the very first dose, but a few days will elapse before you feel and realize the distinct benefit. When you get accustomed out and feel just right again you need not take medicine every day—occasional NR Tablets will then keep your system in good condition and you will always feel your best. Remember, keeping well is easier and cheaper than getting well. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) are sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

Nature's Remedy
N-R TABLETS
Better than Pills. GET A BOX FOR LIVER ILLS. 25c BOX

GRAHAM DRUG COMPANY, GRAHAM, N. C.

For Sale. One two-horse wagon nearly new. One good work horse, cheap. Apply to a commodity which will result not only in greater contentment among the mass of workmen but also bring about a greater production and a greater prosperity to business itself.
DR. WILL S. LONG, Graham, N. C.

To analyze the particulars in the demands of labor is to admit the justice of their complaint in many matters that lie at their basis. The workman demands an adequate wage, sufficient to permit him to live in comfort, unhampered by the fear of poverty and want in his old age. He demands the right to live and the right to work amidst sanitary surroundings, both in home and in the workshop, surroundings that develop and do not retard his own health and well-being; and the right to provide for his children's wants in the matter of health and education. In other words, it is his desire to make the conditions of his life and the lives of those dear to him tolerable and easy to bear.

The establishment of the principles regarding labor laid down in the covenant of the league of nations offers us the way to industrial peace and conciliation. No other road lies open to us. Not to pursue this one is longer to invite enmities, bitterness and antagonisms which in the end only lead to industrial and social disaster. The unwilling workman is not a profitable servant. An employee whose life is hedged about by hard and unjust conditions, which he has no control, lacks that fine spirit of enthusiasm and volunteer effort which are the necessary ingredients of greater productivity. Let us be frank about this so-called matter. The evidences of world-wide unrest which manifest themselves in violence throughout the world bid us pause and consider the means to be found to stop the spread of this contagious thing before it saps the very vitality of the nation itself. Do we gain strength by withholding the remedy? Or is it not the business of statesmen to treat these manifestations of unrest which meet us on every hand as evidences of an economic disorder and to apply constructive remedies wherever necessary, being sure that in the application of the remedy we touch not the vital tissues of our industrial and economic life? There can be no recession of the tide of unrest until constructive instrumentalities are set up to stem that tide.

Government must recognize the right of men collectively to bargain for humane objects that have at their base the mutual protection and welfare of those engaged in all industries. Labor must no longer be treated as a commodity. It must be regarded as the activity of human beings possessed of deep yearnings and desires. The business man gives his best thought to the repair and replenishment of his machinery, so that its usefulness will not be impaired and its power to produce may always be at its height and kept in full vigor and motion. No less regard ought to be paid to the human machinery, which after all propels the machinery of the world and is the great dynamic force that lies back of all industry and progress. Return to the old standards of wage and industry in employment is unthinkable. The terrible tragedy of war which has just ended and which has brought the world to the verge of chaos and disaster would be in vain if there should ensue a return to the conditions of the past. Europe itself, whence has come the unrest which now holds the world at bay, is an example of standstill in these vital human matters which America might well accept as an example, not to be followed but studiously to be avoided. Europe made labor the differential, and the price of it all is enmity and antagonism and protracted industry. The right of labor to live in peace and comfort must be recognized by governments and America should be the first to lay the foundation stones upon which industrial peace shall be built.

Labor not only is entitled to an adequate wage, but capital should receive a reasonable return upon its investment and is entitled to protection at the hands of the government in every emergency. No government worthy of the name can "play" these elements against each other, for there is a mutual interest between them which the government must seek to express and safeguard at all costs.

The right of the individual to strike is inviolate and ought not to be interfered with by any process of government, but there is a predominant right and that is the right of the government to protect all of its people and to assert its power and majesty against the challenge of any class. The government, when it asserts that right, seeks not to antagonize a class, but simply to defend the right of a whole people against irreparable harm and injury that might be done by the attempt by any class to usurp a power that only government itself has a right to exercise as protection to all.

In the matter of international disputes which have led to war, statesmen have sought to set up as a remedy arbitration for war. Does this not point the way for the settlement of industrial disputes, by the establishment of a tribunal, fair and just alike to all, which will settle industrial disputes which in the past have led to war and disaster? America, witnessing the evil consequences which have followed out of such disputes between these contending forces, must not admit itself impotent to deal with these matters by means of peaceful processes. Surely, there must be some method of bringing together in a council of peace and amity these two great interests out of which will come a happier day of peace and co-operation, a day that will make men more hopeful and enthusiastic in their various tasks, that will make for more contentment and happiness in living and a more tolerable condition among all classes of men. Certainly human intelligence can devise some acceptable tribunal for adjusting the differences between capital and labor.

This is the hour of test and trial for America. By her prowess and strength, and the indomitable courage of her soldiers, she demonstrated her power to vindicate on foreign battlefields her conceptions of liberty and justice. Let not her influence as a mediator between capital and labor be weakened and her own failure to settle matters of purely domestic concern be proclaimed to the world. That she should in this country who threaten direct action to force their will upon a majority, Russia today with its blood and terror, is a painful object lesson of the power of minorities. It makes little difference what minority it is; whether capital or labor, or any other class; no sort of privilege will ever be permitted to dominate this country. We are a democracy; where the majority are the masters, or all the hopes and purposes of the men who founded this government have been defeated and forgotten. In America there is but one way by which great reforms can be accomplished and that is through the orderly processes of representative government. Those who would propose any other method of reform are enemies of this country. America will not be daunted by threats nor lose her composure or calmness in these distressing times. We can afford, in the midst of this day of passion and unrest, to be self-contained and serene. The instrument of all reform in America is the ballot. The road to economic and social reform in America is the straight road of justice to all classes and conditions of men. Men have but to follow this road to realize the full fruition of their objects and purposes. Let those beware who would take the shorter road of disorder and revolution. The right road is the road of justice and orderly process.

The Farmer's Bank Account

With both labor and capital falsely branding the food producer as the high-cost-of-living profiteer, our farmers must fight together under strong leaders if they are to continue to get a living wage for their labor. In our own county this bank will always stand for your prosperity. Nationally-internationally—the strong voice that is speaking for the American farmer today is

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

The farmer is not a profiteer. He has earned his bank account, his credit rating, his home comforts, by saving the world from starvation. But the world is moving fast, and to keep in weekly touch with farm conditions everywhere—to hold what he has won—the farmer should regularly read THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN. The information you will get in the next 52 big issues may make or save you $100.00 to add to your savings. If you have an account with us, you can instruct us to charge it $1.00 for your year's subscription. If you keep your surplus cash under the old mattress send us $1.00 for THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN. Or, better still, come in and get acquainted—today.

5¢
the copy everywhere

The National Bank of Amalance
Capital $50,000 J. L. SCOTT, JR., President Phog 530

Call on
Chas. A. Scott
Cashier
The
National Bank
of Amalance
Graham, N. C.

Gentlemen:
(1) Because you know me, enter my name for THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN for one year and charge the cost, $1.00, to me.
or
(2) Here's my dollar. I want THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN. Send it to me.

Cross out one
My Name)
My Address)
(City) (State)