oseph B. Cheshire.

The feed for baby chicks which has been used with success by the Poultry Department of the North Carolina State Agricultural College is, according to Dr. B. F. Kaupp, head of this work, com-posed of infertile eggs, boiled hard, rolled oats and bread

One hard-boiled egg, one tea-cup heaping full of breakfast rolled oats, and one heaping teacupfull of finely pulverized state bread. Either wheat or corn bread will do.

The egg contains much stimulative substance called vitamine, and greatly aids in starting the chicks off. Feed this mixture for ten days to two weeks and then gradually change it to the follow ing dry mash and grain feed: 2 parts ground oats, 2 parts corn meal, 2 parts wheat bran, 1 part one meal, and 1 part meat meal. Mix well and keep in small hopers before them at all times, and times a day feed small quantities of small chicken feed or finely cracked corn and wheat,

Dr. Kaupp will be glad to furnish information on how to brood chickens, how to operate an incubator, or to send plans of types of coops and houses, free of charge.
