Senate Kills League of Nations Covenant in Final Vote on Peace Treaty.

SENT BACK TO PRESIDENT

German Revolution a Mystery, the Undercurrents of Which Are a World Puzzle—Chaos Seems to Prevail—How it Affects Treaty Status—The Presidential Nomination Race.

By E. F. CLIPSON.

The League of Nations covenant is dead, for the present at least, so far as this country is concerned. The final vote on the ratification resolution stood 40 for ratification and 35 against it. Twenty-eight Republicans and 21 Democrats voted to ratify with the reservations that had been adopted, and 12 Republicans and 23 Democrats voted against it. The following is a poll of the votes:

Twelve senators, nine Republicans and three Democrats, were paired. They were: Newberry (Rep.) and McCumber (Rep.), for, with Fall (Rep.), against; Nelson (Rep.) and Harding (Rep.), for, with Penrose (Rep.), against; Cummins (Rep.) and Townsend (Rep.), for, with Poindexter (Rep.), against; Gerry (Dem.) and Jones (Dem., N. M.), for, with Smith (Dem., Ariz.), against.

The final defeat of the treaty was accomplished by a combination of Democratic senators who followed the president's command to reject the treaty as it had been modified by the senate, and the group of both Republican and Democratic senators who were opposed to the League of Nations in any form, and these latter are the only ones who are satisfied with the result.

Following the rejection of the treaty the senate passed a resolution returning the treaty to the president with the formal notice of its failure, and it can now come before the senate again without the need of a new treaty.

Senator Knox introduced a joint resolution for the purpose of declaring the war at an end, and this resolution follows the terms of the Versailles treaty exclusive of the league covenant.

The action of the senate in defeating the treaty means that it will now become a leading issue in the presidential campaign. That the majority of the American people had hoped to see the treaty adopted, some with and some without reservations, is clearly evidenced by the expressions of the great mass of the newspapers, and both parties will attempt to make capital out of this sentiment by an effort to convince the public that the other side was responsible for the defeat of the treaty.

American's entry into the League of Nations is still a possibility. The treaty can be returned to the senate nuncupation comes from his government that the present rioting and communitarian demonstrations will be controlled as easily as were the Spartan outbreaks. Observers who have been warning that a renewal of war in Europe was imminent and that it needed but a spark, are firm in the belief that the spark has been applied. Meanwhile the Kaiser in his Holland retreat, is saving wood literally. The erstwhile crown prince is reported running around in circles alternately buoyed and depressed by the course of events. Hipland has doubled the guards surrounding the residences of the two. His determination not to abate the right of sanctuary to which she claims they are entitled, she also seems equally disposed not to permit them to escape or to become active participants in any of the affairs of the disturbed area.

In the race for presidential nomination the Minnesota primary furnished a test of strength and a new basis for forming theories. Unless verified returns change the figures Wood will be shown to have carried every county in the state but two. His lead appears to be 50 per cent over his nearest competitor, Senator Johnson, with nearly four times as many votes as Lowden, although Minnesota is the native state of the Illinois governor. This dispels a prediction that a soldier candidate would be defeated in an agricultural state, which though traditionally Republican, President Wilson almost carried in 1916, the claim being made that the "kept us out of war" issue contributed largely to his strength.

Much significance is also attached to the comparatively large vote in the primary for Herbert Hoover, whose name it was necessary to paste or write upon the ballot. It is taken as an evidence of his strength with independent Republicans. The Wood forces regard the Minnesota result as an augury of success in South Dakota.

Mr. Bryan has announced himself in favor of primary instructions while Mr. McAdoo is against them. The former thinks that general opposition to instructions savors of reaction against the primary system. Incidentally, Bryan makes it clear that he is not in favor of the Democratic nomination, neither is he running against it. His attitude seems to be that he is not seeking it, but that the nomination may do all the seeking it wants in his direction.

In pursuance of plans to stop massing and enforcing upon Turkey the terms of the peace treaty, Constantinople was occupied by allied forces under Gen. Sir George F. Milne of the British army. The ancient city returns to Christian control for the first time in nearly five centuries. This long and costly military demonstration was accomplished with but slight resistance. At the war office an exchange of shots occurred in which two British soldiers were killed and four wounded. Nine Turks were killed. The city which has withstood so many sieges and the grave of so many expeditions sent against it, has never before in history surrendered so quietly. The allied high commission has announced that in the occupation there was no intention to permanently destroy the Sultan's authority or deprive the Turks of the city.

Mexico continues to be a point of most absorbing interest. As a problem it will soon call for something like definite settlement. In the present condition of the world, the dearth of materials, especially minerals, oil and foodstuffs, this natural treasure must be opened. Just how it is to be accomplished is not exactly evident. America and American interests have been listening to the claims of rival candidates for direction of affairs in that country. Oregon has put forth a statement of his qualifications, pleading by implying that he is the only man who has the ability to grapple with the problems of that disturbed nation and restore it to tranquility or at least comparative safety for agricultural and industrial pursuits. There is a familiar sentiment to his assertions, just like those of others who have aspired to the task and failed signally.

President Deschanel and Premier Millerand of France have united to oppose misconceptions concerning that country which they fear are forming in the United States. Deschanel has taken to combat the charge that France is either militaristic or imperialistic either before or after the next election, and if ratified at such time we would become a part of the league. If this is not done the nation can apply for membership in the league just as any nation not a party to the Versailles treaty may do, and be accepted by the nations that are now members.

Although Germany has occupied an eminence conspicuous in the center of the stage of world events during the week and considerable light has arisen from the confusion razing within her borders, much mystery rules as to the true state of affairs. Dark areas exist which the spotlights of anxious international interest and the telescopes of publicity cannot penetrate. One thing certain is that the revolution instigated by Kapp, Ludlow and others with Kapp as self-appointed dictator, has been overthrown after five days of hectic, feverish existence. The active agent in bringing about this speedy demise was a general strike of workmen centered in Berlin.

Whether the comprising of militaristic designs, an effort to administer oxygen to the gasping hopes of royalty, a cunning machination of bolshevism, or a deeply laid plot involving all parties to muddy the waters of international affairs and so defeat the terms of the peace treaty as affecting Germany, is not yet evident and may not be clear for a long time. At any rate, the revolution appears to have been a feeble child. When the railroad workers quit, and also those of the public utilities including gas, water and electricity, the life-giving and distributive facilities ceased. A juster infant could have lasted longer, but eventually would have succumbed.

Has the Ebert government been mere camouflage? Ebert seems to have known what was impending and at the first sound of alarm deserted Berlin after calling upon the proletariat to support him by the strike. Earlier indications that Noske, his minister of defense, the man who has recently been proclaiming his acceptance of the principles of the treaty and his determination to help work them out, had an understanding with the revolutionaries. Time alone will demonstrate the truth or falsity of this indication. With the Russian, Turkish and eastern situations that they are added to the complications of the Adriatic situation and the internal affairs of France and England, it would seem to be a fateful opportunity time for Germany to stage a muddling and distracting demonstration. There are elements aplenty in Germany committed to such intentions. That which now seems likely is that the various groups could not work together harmoniously. Ludendorff was in Moscow intriguing with Lenin and Trotsky, a case indeed of politics making strange bedfellows. At home there was a movement, if Ebert and his followers could be rendered sufficiently complacent, to set up Hindenburg as a candidate for president. Notwithstanding that Ludendorff, the embodiment of reactionism, was flirting with the personification of advanced radicalism, and Hindenburg's supporters were endeavoring to make friends with the various groups could not work together harmoniously.
