CO. OPS WIN IN N. C. LEGISLATURE

Friends Settlement Old Bright Belt 1922 and Part 1923 to Be Made March 16.

All efforts to disrupt the Tobacco Growers Cooperative Association by adverse legislation in North Carolina were apparently abandoned last week when the North Carolina Senate referred the substitute for the Grady bill to the Senate Committee on Agriculture. This action was regarded by leaders as ending all chances for an anti coop bill at this session of the legislature which is due to adjourn this week.

When the Senate held a hearing on the Grady bill, members of the association from 15 North Carolina counties were on hand to testify in behalf of the association but were not given an opportunity owing to the short time allowed for the hearing.

Congressman Hallett Ward spoke before the Senate Committee on the Grady bill and judging by the applause he received the audience was almost unanimously against the bill which was characterized as "legal murder" of the growers organization.

The final attempt of those opposed to the association was to get through a substitute bill allowing judges to grant injunctions at their discretion which would practically annul the rights of the association to require deliveries from members. This was the third attempt during the present legislature to pass a bill against the growers association.

The first effort was the Braswell bill in the House, the hearing on this bill being attended by a large crowd supplied with printed badges announcing "I am for the Braswell Bill." Reports reaching Raleigh were to the effect that opponents of the growers association had spent much money and time in getting this crowd to the hearing on the Braswell bill.

The association announces that final settlement of 1922 old bright belt tobacco and final settlement on 35 acres of 1923 old bright belt tobacco is to be made at all old belt markets on March 16, upon presentation of Participation Certificates at the warehouses where members made deliveries.

Almost 400 Farmers Join Cotton Growers Association in Three Days

Raleigh, March 4.—Almost 400 North Carolina farmers have signed contracts and joined the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association since February, according to a statement issued by P. W. Chambliss, Editor of the Cotton Grower last night.

"The exact number," said the statement, "is 391, and 108 of these contracts came to the office during the last three days, and these contracts are evidence of the steadily growing confidence of cotton growing farmers in the Cotton Growers Association. From every section of the State come letters from members commending the management of the Association; and telling of the growing disposition among cotton to join the Association and deliver their cotton to the Association the coming season."

This state has now over 37,000 members in the Cotton Growers Association and there have been very few members who have voiced complaints during the past year concerning the cooperative method of selling cotton.

Some farmers of Union County have reported to farm Agent Tom Brown that they are receiving as high as $200 per month from their poultry flocks.

Agriculture Extension work is having a marked effect on the agriculture of North Carolina. Reports made by the county farm agents show cooperation with hundreds of farmers and statistics show that this cooperation is benefiting both the counties and the State as a whole.

Credit Union Law Amend.

Credit unions will in the future be known as SAVING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS according to a recent amendment to the law, states George Ross chief of the State Division of Markets. The amendment also increases the power of these local organizations to borrow money, reduces the reserve to be kept on deposit in banks, provides for the guaranty of contract and makes provision for a strong central organization.

Recent marketing activity by the Division will help the poultry farmers of the State in disposing of their eggs at a profit. The Division has added an assistant to V. W. Lewis, livestock marketing specialist, and efforts are being made to secure cold storage facilities for surplus eggs. Two carloads of surplus eggs have been sold by the division in the last few days.

English Town Makes Specialty of Blankets

There ought to be a game—perhaps there is—in which a town's name is answered by its industry, an exchange observes. "Sheffield," cries one, "Knives," says the other; "Cheddar" cries another, "Cheese," replies one, To Witney, the answer, without any quibbling, is "Blankets." Witney is pervaded, you may say, with blankets, wrapped up in them, indeed, devoted to them, and proud of them, as well it may be. For are not they the best in Britain? And this is no new industry, but a 500-year-old one, and it has ever brought prosperity to the little town and work for its people. Still older than its blankets is the town, the Witaney of the Saxons, and a thank-offering of Queen Emma, wife of that Canute who sat beside the sea. It has its market place, where the Butter Cross of 1883 made shelter for the farmers' wives who came to sell their eggs and butter. But food is secondary to blankets in this little place. Behind the one long street of houses runs the Windrush, that serves the blanket makers with its clear waters. In the town stands the guild hall of the Blanket-Makers' company, with their arms and motto—a motto that gives good reason for the continuous prosperity of the blanket makers and their industry: "Weave truth with trust."

Sweden Great Power During Middle Ages

Cities of southern Sweden were among the greatest commercial centers of the civilized world during the Middle Ages. Stockholm and Lund ranked with London and Paris, says the Family Herald. They absorbed the commerce of the northern seas and were the admiration of thousands of travelers and merchants who passed through them and trafficked with them. Later Sweden was the great military power of northern Europe. The ambassadors of the Swedish kings were received with the utmost deference in every court. Her soldiers won great battles and ended mighty wars. The England of Cromwell and Charles II was unimportant and isolated in comparison with this northern kingdom, which could pour forth armies of gigantic blood warriors headed by brave and astute generals. Sweden is today a peaceful kingdom. Even the secession of Norway was accomplished without bloodshed. Denmark once domineered and tyrannized over both kingdoms.

Keen Shot Kills Tiger

With his long tail erect over his back and his head held high, came the monarch of the forest straight for us. His strength, grace and speed are impossible to describe. As he rounded a turn about 60 yards away I let him have it with my right barrel. The bullet went true to its mark. When it hit him, full in the right eye, he was in the act of making a spring. The leap, for a good 20 feet beyond, came, but when he touched the earth he was stone dead. The bullet had entered his brain, and not a mark was visible on his beautiful coat, nor was there the least twitching of his muscles after the fatal shot.

No one there had ever seen or heard of a tiger being shot without having a mark of any kind made on his skin.—Brig. Gen. William Mitchell in National Geographic Magazine.

Sea and Land in Battle

The washing away by the sea of land worth millions of dollars on the coast of New Jersey, pointed to in the annual report of the United States coast and geodetic survey, draws attention to the battle waged year in and year out, between the sea and land all over the world. The sea and land have been foes since the beginning of time and, according to some physiographers, these old enemies will remain such until the last mountain pinnacle has been washed down and ground to sand, and the vicious ocean rolls unbroken around the world. But whatever may be the outcome millions of years hence, we are still in the give-and-take era. Many miles of land are washed away annually; but compensating areas are built up in other places.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Not to Be Caught Twice

There was a queer old custom in England that compelled a person when making a certain kind of statement to add: "Except the mayor." Foote, the comedian, having remarked at an inn: "I have dined as well as anyone in England," the landlord prompted him: "Except the mayor." "I except nobody," said Foote boldly. For this the landlord had him haled before a magistrate, who fined him a shilling for not conforming to the ancient custom. Foote paid the shilling, at the same time observing that he thought his accuser "the greatest fool in Christendom—except the mayor."

Wisdom from Babe's Lips

As a child of three Wolfgang Mozart's wonderful playing on the harpsichord was the talk of Salzburg. He was only four years old when he composed a concerto so difficult that even his father, one of the most skilled violinists in Germany, could not play it. "Of course," said the infant prodigy, "no one can be expected to play it without diligent practice." A year later, when Wolfgang was only five years old, he was invited to give a recital in the hall of the university, when the magic of his tiny fingers worked his auditors to a pitch of the wildest enthusiasm.

Value of Antitoxins Explained by Doctor

Toxins are the poisons of disease and produce the symptoms common to the disease after circulating through the blood. Antitoxins are substances that work against or neutralize the toxins in any given cases, and they are produced by the use of the bacteria of the toxins. These are injected into an animal, usually a horse, in increasing doses, until it becomes habituated to them and is no longer made ill by them. The immunity or resistance resides in the blood, which has now developed a defense mechanism against the poison. The animal's blood is then drawn off in small quantities, filtered and purified. This blood is in turn injected into the blood of a man, where it exerts the same protecting influence against the particular toxin by which it was produced as it did in the horse. This is very briefly the nature and mode of operation of antitoxic serums. The use of an antitoxin in diphtheria has already saved countless lives and has changed the once dreaded and fatal disease to a rather simple complaint if diagnosed early and treated with antitoxin. The discoveries of the Dicks and of Dochez promise to give the same relief from scarlet fever when methods, originated only in 1924, are perfected for this particular disease.—Dr. Walter B. James in the Outlook.

"Prettiness" Makes No Appeal to Normal Boy

When nature hands on the good points of parents she invariably seems to be more generous to the boys than to the girls. Curly hair, long eyelashes and good complexions go to the boys more frequently than to the girls. Notice the boys with natural "marcel" waves and curling eyelashes, and notice how they value them. A girl would be proud of them, but most men and boys are mortally ashamed to possess these advantages. They blush every time any one mentions eyelashes, while the curls are given fervent applications of water and brilliantine to restrain their wayward tendencies, says London Answers. All this, while less fortunate sisters try vainly to play the coquette with scanty, sandy eyelashes, and spend a small fortune at the hairdresser's in an endeavor to take the lankness out of their uninteresting tresses. Real auburn tresses, too, are more often than not handed on to the boys. But there is one consolation. A girl thus endowed may refer to her tresses as "titian red," but a boy is never allowed to imagine that he is anything else but "ginger".

Cure for Blisters

Blisters, caused by the shoe rubbing the foot, develop into a real painful ulcer if they are not properly treated. Mr. Mann of Anytown learned. If pricked, some disinfectant should be applied immediately. The best way to let the water out is to pass a bit of vaseline thread through the blister. When the blister is on the sole of the foot where the skin is thick, take a fine white thread and grease it well with borated or pure vaseline. Thread a coarse needle and pass it through the blister from one end to the other. Cut the thread on each side and cover the spot with a bit of vaseline. Next day draw the thread out. The blister will be gone.

The Telephone

Elizabeth was three years old and, what is more, Elizabeth, like most small girls, was very fond of games of "make believe." Her latest delight in the realm of fancy was "playing telephones," a game of which she never grew tired.

Her grandmother was well aware of Elizabeth's fancy and one night, when the little girl was proving obstinate about going to have her bath, the old lady thought she would try a little strategy. Grandmother (holding one end of the toy telephone)—Hello! Is that Elizabeth?

Elizabeth (very delighted)—Yes, grandma!

Grandmother—Well, come along, Elizabeth. It's time for your bath.

Elizabeth (dropping receiver)—Wrong number!

Wife Adds to His Fame

Heppelwhite was one of the eminent furniture finishers and designers who flourished under the reign of the Georges in England, and whose furniture was in vogue about the time of the American Revolution. When he died in 1786 his wife carried on his work and produced other pieces and original designs that were very popular for several decades. Much of the Heppelwhite work was done in mahogany and in light woods.

What Else Was There for Millicent to Do?

When Mrs. Gray came home Millicent met her at the door; she seemed bursting with news. "Mother!" "Well, dear?" "What do you think Robert and that Jones boy did this afternoon?" "Why, nothing but, I hope—" "Mother!" Millicent paused impressively. "They went and they built—a fire! Yes'm! With kerosene! Out behind the chicken coop where you told 'em they never, never must!" "Millicent! Your little brother! Why, he might have—but why didn't you stop him?" "Mother, told him, and I told him, and he said he would, and I took him by the shoulder and shook—" But Mrs. Gray was seized with a sudden suspicion. "Millicent, you know I keep the kerosene locked in the storeroom, and Robert doesn't know where I keep the key. Look me in the eye, Millicent. How did he get that kerosene?" Millicent's eyelids flickered. "Well, you see, mother—when I saw that Robert and that Jones boy were determined to build a fire, why—er—I had to get the things for 'em, didn't I, and superintend 'em, didn't I?"—Youth's Companion.

His Gratitude Greater Than His Knowledge

A Filipino boy who had studied English in a Hawaiian night school sent the following letter to a white man who had befriended him and who had made him a present of some pictures and a shirt: "I received your kind and welcome letter from you, so, I in it, I was very, very glad to hear from you that you so stated at present in good health and fiscal condition. At the second how glad I am and your sister that you were received of our picture in that brilliant afternoon, and so, by this time we were very pleasant that you will keep it so well the same as our bodies always talking and caring for you here. And so, even that picture is not very personally playing of your spirit so, be carefully like so as you body. About the shirt is coming to in my hand, I full of joy and a merry heart so that you did not forget of your promised to me, and now, it is very thanking at the heaven and you of your truly remember and present of this your brother did not know how to forget asking of God at the heaven that he always caring and protecting to you here day and night and far of badly misfortune."—Pathfinder Magazine.

Names for Nautical Fare

The sailor resembles the quick order restaurant waiter in that he invariably has a pet name for articles of diet. Salt beef, that standy of the menu at sea, was known during the Nineteenth century as "junk," "old horse," "salt horse" or "salt junk." It was responsible, held one writer of sea stories, for the mahogany complexion of sailors, which was commonly attributed to a combination of rum and the weather. A stew answered to the name of "lobscouse," and was made of salt beef, biscuits and potatoes, seasoned highly with pepper. A dish of cold fish and potatoes was labeled "twice-laid," while a pudding of dried peas boiled in a cloth was welcomed by the sailors under the name of "dog's body." Ship biscuits were even then called "hardtack," while soft, white bread was christened "soft tack" or "soft tommy."

Geese on Guard

Wild geese are extremely wary, and take nothing for granted. While feeding they have a perfect system of sentries. Not content with this, every now and then two or three will fly round high up to see that nothing is even approaching them from a distance.

Their hearing is very acute, and it is said their sense of smell is also. Certainly, if they are approached down wind, they are up and away at once, even if the greatest care has been taken to keep out of sight.

Teacher Blushed

It was a lesson on punctuation, and Jimmy was almost asleep at his desk. "Now," said the teacher, "if I say, 'I must leave, as I have an engagement—By the way, what is the time?' I place a 'dash' after 'engagement,' because the sentence is broken off abruptly."

Only Real Growth

Some men grow, others just swell up. It most frequently happens that the latter swell in the head, rather than elsewhere, and a little money largely contributes to this. True growth is marked by development of mind, heart, and soul.—Grit.
