$1.00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

Entered at the Postoffice at Graham, N. C., as second-class matter.

GRAHAM, N. C., JULY 7, 1927.

President Coolidge celebrated his 55th birthday in the Black Hills on July 4th. A mammoth cake lit up with 55 candles formed a part of the menu.

The government treasury showed a surplus of $635,809,921 at the close of the fiscal year, June 30. Receipts amounted to $4,129,000,000; expenditures to $3,493,000,000. The national debt at the same time was $18,511,906,000, a reduction of $1,131,309,000 for the year.

The man-hunt for Broadus Miller, the negro who assaulted and slew Gladys Kincaid, 15-year old Morganton girl, on Tuesday night, June 21st, ended last Sunday morning. Commodore Burleson, a hardy mountaineer, came upon Miller in the mountains near Linville Falls. The negro was armed with a shot gun with a single shell. He fired on Burleson who escaped behind a tree. Burleson fired five shots from his pistol, killing the negro instantly. Thus ended one of the most determined man hunts in the annals of the state. Rewards for Miller, dead or alive, aggregated $2000.

Commander Richard E. Byrd and his three companions, who took off Wednesday morning from Long Island for a non-stop flight for Paris ended in a landing in the English Channel, near Ver-sur-Mer, 200 yards from the French shore at 3:30 Friday morning. They flew over France for hours, but a dense fog obscured everything from view. In the landing they suffered some slight bruises, but they swam ashore. Since they have received the plaudits of the French in a degree that seems not to have been dulled by the honors heaped upon Col. Lindbergh. They were in the air 43 hours.

Big Time Promised at Farm Picnics.

The 20,000 or more citizens of North Carolina who visited the branch station farms during the annual picnics and field days held last summer know what to expect at the field days this year, but even they will be surprised.

"A good time will be had by all," promises Dr. R. Y. Winters, director of the experiment station. Dr. Winters is working with Fred E. Miller, in charge of test farms, and the several superintendents to see that good programs and valuable exhibits are prepared for each gathering.

The series begins with the picnic at the Blackland station near Statesville on July 21st. Then there will be a break due to the State Farmers' Convention at Raleigh, July 26 to 28. Immediately following the State Convention, however the picnics begin again with the one at the Tobacco Branch Station, scheduled for August 4. Then there is another vacant week due to the meeting of the National Soybean Association at Washington on August 9, 10 and 11. On August 18, the field day will be held at the Mountain Branch Station near Swannanoa; on September 1, will be the picnic for the Upper Coastal Station near Willard.

Last year about 21,000 persons attended these events and this year the college authorities invite all farmers and their friends living adjacent to one of the stations to make plans to attend the picnic held at that station. A good speaking program is being arranged. There will be trips of inspection over the fields and grounds and there will be exhibits showing the nature of the work being done on the farm.

Much time and labor will be expended to make the picnic successful.

Pyrotol costing only $8.90 was used to blow out some stumps that had broken $100 worth of plows on the farm of W. D. Leggett of Edgecombe county.

Leave Cotton Thick For Biggest Yields

Don't chop the cotton too thinly on the row but leave two plants the width of the hoe apart and get bigger yields.

That's the advice of P. H. Kime, plant breeder and agronomist at the North Carolina Experiment Station of State College.

"The results which we have had in testing thicker spacing of cotton are in line with results secured by farmers and other experiment stations in the South," says Mr. Kime. "If we are to get the largest yield of seed cotton per acre, it is necessary to have from 15 to 20 thousand plants on each acre of land. The largest yields that we have secured in our spacing tests were made where the plants were eight inches apart in the row with one plant to the hill or 12 inches apart in the row with two plants to each hill. Spacing the hills 15, 18 and 24 inches apart has not given us as good yields as the closer spacings. The yields on the wider spacings may be increased, however, by leaving 3 to 4 plants to each hill but even with this the yields are not as large as from the closer spacings."

The reason why cotton produces heavier when closely spaced is that the vegetative growth is reduced and the plants fruit earlier. This latter is an important matter under boll weevil conditions, explains Mr. Kime. He states that the wider spacings, require more labor with the hoe and it is usually difficult to secure a uniform stand of 3 and 4 plants at regular intervals.

For practical purposes, it is safe to chop the cotton the width of the hoe leaving an average of two plants in each hill.

Tarheel Chickens Will Visit Canada.

Two pens of Tarheel poultry, one containing a trio of Silver Leghorns and the other a trio of Golden Wyandottes, will be exhibited at the Third World's Poultry Congress at Ottawa, Canada, as a result of the renown won by poultry club members of this state in breeding fine birds.

Officials of the Madison Square Garden Poultry Show at New York City are collecting an exhibit of rare or unusual varieties of poultry grown in the United States to be exhibited at the Poultry Congress which meets July 27 to August 4. For several years the poultry club members of this State have exhibited their poultry at the Garden show. Last year some of the major prizes were won by these members. One club member won the blue ribbon for having the best Rhode Island Red pullet in the show. Others won ribbons on some of the little known varieties. As a result, Harvey C. Wood of the Garden Poultry show wired State College asking that exhibits of Silver Leghorns and Golden Wyandottes from this State be sent for inclusion in the national exhibit.

The poultry will be selected from the flocks of Catawba County club members and the birds will be shipped directly to New York by County Agent J. W. Hendricks.

J. M. Gray, assistant director of extension at State College, and Dr. B. F. Kaupp, head of the poultry department, state that this is a very unusual honor to come to North Carolina. At the Third World's Poultry Congress, the birds from North Carolina will be exhibited with fine poultry from every nation of the earth. This honor is but an added tribute to the rapid strides being made in poultry growing in this State, say these agricultural leaders. Since 1915, the college has conducted active work in poultry with rural boys and girls. In recent years, this work has begun to bear profitable fruit.

Beautiful home surroundings also impress the child as many farm women have learned since they began to improve their kitchens and other interiors of the home.

A rotation of crops will aid in combating insects. Where a field is grown in the same crop year after year, there is a natural increase in the number of insects which attack this crop.

The average North Carolina farm that neglects the home-making idea will generally fail commercially. If the home is provided with livestock, poultry, garden and farm products with the surplus sold, a real farm home will be developed regardless of commercial success.

Tom Tarheel says his oldest boy is more willing to help on the farm since he has all the money he can make from his own pigs and land.
