MEMORIAL DAY.

This day, May 10th, has been observed in North Carolina for more than fifty years as a day sacred to the memory of the boys in grey who made the supreme sacrifice for the cause of this beloved Southland.

They left a heitage for sacrifice and bravery that will endure throughout the ages. The Spartans at Thermopylae, whose supreme bravery foiled the invader, did not supass many of the acts of heroism enacted by the Dixie boys.

The conflict has been called the "Lost Cause", which is a misnomer. For a season it looked like all was lost. But yet in the lifetime of have seen their devasted land grow and flower as if by magic and stride ahead of a large part of the victors'. And the passing years continue to foud itself.

years to come, never fail to pay homage to the memory of their forebears and ever garner inspiration from their valorous deeds in war and peace. And wherever one of these sleeps beneath the sod may the scion not forget to place a flower in grateful and reverential memory.

C. R. Love, chairman of the Alamance County Democratic executive committee, announces that precinct meetings will be held at the polling places at 2:30 p. m. on May 20th to select delegates to the county convention which will be held at 2:30 p. m. on Saturday, June 9th.

Gov. Al. Smith and Secretary Herbert Hoover are still leading candidates, Democratic and Republican, respectively, for president.

Some dissatisfied ones have suggested a third party to Senator Reed and Josephus Daniels. But there is nothing doing.

Good Market Exists For Dogwood Timber

Dogwood furnishes ideal timber for the manufacture of loom shuttles, spool heads and numerous other similar articles. On account of the texture of the wood, it retains its shape and size with no shrink or swell after being throughly cured. "We are finding that dogwood is in good demand and finds a is in good demand and finds a ready sale at the present time," says R. W. Graeber, extension forester at State College. "During the last two years, farmers of Iredell county have marketed more than $30,000 worth of this timber. This is in contrast to the usual idea that the dogwood is a worthless tree and should be destroyed. Two years ago, F. F. Parry and Bert Hyder located a dogwood mill in the Sharpsburg township where 300 cords of the timber was harvested. About the same time O. B. Jernigan located a mill at Harmony, buying wood from the farmers of the section. Both of these mills have now been established at Statesville and are buying timber over a wider range buying timber over a wider range buying timber over a wider range buying timber over a wider range.

Stop To Think

(Copyright 1927) By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla

W. S. Farish, President of the Humble Oil & Refining Company,

That Mother Nature, like every seemly mother, has foreseen and adequately provided for the various wants of her earth-children. For her human children in particular she appears to have anticipated a constantly growing and ultimately stupendous requirement for energy, which requirement she has provided for by making available almost inex-haustible sources of energy in a number of widely different forms, each appropriate for one of the several stages of humanity's advance toward a perfect society of Primitive man naturally employed primitive forms of energy, such as the enforced labor of his fellow man and, later, the strength of the beasts of the fields and still later, power of the winds and the work of falling water. Thruout countless ages these sufficed for man's need, and only within many of the Southern braves they the last century has he at length learned to convert heat into energy, so as to make the natural fuels avai!able to him as sources of power.

Once having recognized heat as accelerate the stride. It was in the a source of power, man first seiz-"Lost Cause" that the Southland ed upon wood as his most obvious fuel; much later he learned to burn coal, and coal has served May the teeming descendants of him until he finally discovered the Southern heroes, in the long petroleum or crude oil and found that this liquid fuel is far superior to anything he has previouly utilized.

Mother Nature, in her charac-teristic lavish fashion, has equipped man with an abundance of liquid fuels, and that accordingly he can meet his requirements for liquid fuels and lubricants for untold years to come out of Mother Nature's stores. If his supply of petroleum ever become inadequate, he knows perfectly well how to convert coal and other materials into liquid fuels in sufficient volume to compensate fully any possible deficiency in petro-

The only apparent flaw in Mother Nature's plan is her failure to hide securely enough and to disguise sufficiently her stores of petroleum energy to prevent her human children finding them and exploiting them more rapidly than they are really needed.

The only trouble with the oil industry today is that it has become too efficient in discovering Mother Nature's secret hiding places and in taking oil from them in volumes greater than are required, with the result that the prices for oil have fallen below the cost of production, profits have suffered accordingly, and oil has been forced into economic uses in which it is in fact wasted.

Industrial conditions will immediately improve whenever this acute overproduction ceases.

Watch Suspicious

Symptoms in Springtime

Both of these mills have now been established at Statesville and are buying timber over a wider range of territory. These mills buy dogwood from farmers for cash and take any amount that is hanled to them."

Mr. Graeber states that in the past many farmers have been in ellined to destroy the dogwood trees as a worthless crop. Yet the young growth fits in well with other timber, making a good understory in stands of second growth plnes, and helps to fill in the openings in mixed stands of hardwood. It will grow to merchantable size as quickly as any other timber and thus adds to the returns from the land.

The trees may be easily marketed at good prices after they reach a size of five inches in diameter and like other timber, the larger the size, the more profitable the harvest, states Mr. Graeber.

Landowners, therefore, are being urged to preserve the young growth now found widely over the State.
