Control Chick Disease By Proper Handling.

The exercise of strict care in handling young chicks is highly important in eradicating bacillary white diarrhea, states H. C. Gauger, of the N. C. State College poultry department.

Persons walking into brooder houses, rodents and other wild creatures, contaminated food, manure from diseased birds, and unsanitary houses all are responsible for spreading the disease germs. Another source of infection is in diseased eggs, which always hatch out diseased chicks.

"To wipe out the diarrhea, all diseased chicks should be killed and burned or buried," says Gauger. "All brooder houses should be cleaned every day until the chicks are seven days old and then once every four days thereafter. All birds and animals which might spread the germs should be kept away from the chicks."

At least one sq. ft. of floor space should be provided for each chick. A good disinfectant should be included in their diet so as to build up their resistance to disease.

To prevent the chicks from eating food that has fallen to the floor where germs may be lurking, the feeding pans should be placed upon wire frames at least one and one-half feet square and an inch and a half above the floor. The wire should be small mesh. Or size 1-1 hardware cloth will also serve satisfactorily. The frames should be cleaned daily.

Gauger states that a most important step is to secure eggs or chicks from hatcheries whose flocks have been found free of the diarrhea after being given the blood tests, or at least make sure that the eggs came from blood-tested birds.

Present Monetary Policy Aids Tarheel Farming.

Both the economic and the monetary policies of the federal government are bringing marked improvements in southern agricultural conditions, according to Dr. G. W. Forster, head of the department of agricultural economics at N. C. State College.

In North Carolina alone, he said the gross farm income for 1933 has been established at more than $200,000,000, as compared with $140,000,000 in 1932—an increase of 43 percent. Due to lower production costs, the net income was 75 percent higher in 1933 than in 1932.

Tobacco farmers of the South got $19,500,000 in equalization payments and increased prices resulting from adjustment activities. An additional $1,000,000 will be paid in 1934 to those who signed reduction contracts. Payments to cotton growers are expected to reach $100,000,000. These are seen largely as the outgrowth of the government's economic program.

The monetary policy of the federal government in abandoning the gold standard and boosting the price of gold has brought about a general rise of domestic prices as well as an increase in the prices of foreign trade. As the value of foreign moneys increased, the prices offered by foreign buyers for American farm products rose also. Still further rises are expected in the future to accompany the rising price of gold.

As an example, Dr. Forster pointed out, when the British pound was rated at $1.13, the average price for export tobacco was about ten cents a pound. When the rate advanced to $1.53, the price rose to 11 cents a pound, and when the pound reached a valuation of $1.15, the export tobacco price jumped to 13 cents a pound.

Increased prices in cents per lb. could be paid by British buyers without spending additional British money, he said, since the pound has increased in exchange value with the American dollar.

Use Idle Land To Fight Plant Disease

North Carolina farmers suffer an annual loss of several million dollars as a result of the plant diseases affecting the principal crops of this state, according to Dr. R. F. Poole, plant pathologist of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

The crops chiefly affected are: tobacco, corn, wheat, oats; Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, beans, soybeans, cowpeas, peanuts, watermelons, and cabbages.

Some of the parasites which cause the diseases will live for years in the soil even when no crops are grown, Dr. Poole said. But most of them gradually die out or grow weaker when deprived of the plants they thrive on best.

For this reason, he recommended that farmers retiring acreage from cultivation under AAA contracts might leave infested land idle, when practicable, to let the disease germs lose their vigor. Some areas now in tobacco might be allowed to produce nothing but weeds for several years, he said. Other areas could profitably be devoted to pasture or else planted to crops immune to the parasites that cause tobacco diseases.

In instances where land cannot well be left idle or planted to immune crops, Dr. Poole continues, the farmers should obtain the most hardy and disease-resistant plants available. Much headway against some of the diseases can also be made, he said, by planting early and fertilizing the crops so that they will mature before the parasites become active.

disease works most actively in hot weather. Crops planted as soon as possible in the spring after the danger of frost is over usually have a good chance to mature before the worm reaches its most destructive stages.

Still other diseases not caused by parasites are caused by lack of proper ingredients in the soil; such as, magnesium, nitrogen, potash, zinc, iron, manganese, sulphur, and copper. These can usually be remedied by application of the lacking substances, he said.
