A strange looking sort of owl was being exhibited here Monday by "Red" Gillispie. It had a face so much like a monkey that people, where he captured it, called it the "monkey-faced" owl. It was not vicious, rather good looking and seemed to enjoy the attention it received. Mr. Gillispie secured it about fifteen miles from Baltimore.

A musical comedy, sponsored by Graham P. T. A., will be given at the Public School auditorium next Tuesday night. The cast consists of local talent, boys and girls from six through High School. The groups are being trained and coached by B. F. James, a graduate of the Univ. N. C., who has considerable experience in professional training. The play to be given is said to be highly entertaining and enjoyable. The proceeds from the play will be used for the benefit of Graham school band.

A remodeling job on the wood-concrete-block-front building at the southwest side of the Courthouse Square is almost completed, that is, the portion on West Elm street owned by Will Ed Thompson, is the remodeled part, a brick wall taking the place of the wood frame portion. An addition of 20 or more feet to the original building at the back end has been torn away and a brick wall now forms the rear end of the building. The original building was built about 1878 by the late J. W. Harden, a leading merchant of the town for some 30 years.

Coley F. Russell, prominent colored citizen, is away on an extended trip. He left nearly two weeks ago, and was in California a few days ago. He went by the northern route and will return by the southern route, taking in Florida on the return trip. Coley is a tinner and plumber by trade. He has lived here all his life and by industry and saving has accumulated a comfortable estate. He is thoroughly reliable, always accommodating, and esteemed by everybody in the community. No worker in the community deserves a holiday more than he. He has not been a person to take a jaunt and spend when he had something "a-head." Fact is we never heard of him going anywhere before this trip. He has set a fine example of thrift, industry, dependability and personal living for his people.

A Memorial to Dr. Fleming.

In the Welfare office in the new Agricultural building which Dr. P. H. Fleming, Welfare officer from 1919 to 1936, did not live to adorn, has been placed a memorial to him. A card on a table under a picture gives the data: A table (mahogany) donated by Rich & Thompson furniture company; a vase on the table by Hadley's, jewelers; a chair by Green & McClure furniture company; a picture on the wall over the table of Dr. Fleming, by J. Harvey White and Ben V. May, on the Welfare board with Dr. Fleming; and flowers for the vase are furnished by Miss Nellie Fleming, only daughter of her lamented father.

The combination is a richly deserved tribute and memorial to one who faithfully discharged the duties of his office and ministered to and cheered the needy and unfortunate.

Rayon production continued to increase at a comparatively rapid rate in nearly all rayon producing countries during 1936. Japan took the lead in total rayon production and the United States dropped to second place.

Varieties of Brazilian rubber trees are now being grown in the south of Florida and the Federal Government is interesting itself in experiments to develop rubber production in the region below Palm Beach.

Word Guinea, Applied to Gold, Named for Country

The word guinea was applied to the gold coin worth one pound, one shilling, because the precious metal from which the coins were made came from the country called Guinea. But the dollar, the most popular word in the United States, is of real German extract, states a writer in Pearson's London Weekly, coming from thaler, a coin that was made, at first, in the German valley, or thal, of St. Joachim, Bohemia.

And just to show that our estimation of money is no more sordid than that of bygone days, consider the fact that the word wealth is only an extension of the Anglo-Saxon wela, which meant "bliss." The origin of the word tax is found in both Latin and Greek, one of its first meanings being a list or enrollment sheet upon which names were entered. Synonymous with tax is worry, and this has come down to us through the German worgen, which meant "to choke!"

But every nation on earth seems to have had something to banish worry. Alcohol goes back to the Arabic, al Kol, the spirit arising from distillation. Whisky was formerly the Gaelic usquebaugh, from the two words usge and beatha, which together mean "water of life." Port is a drink that we owe to Portugal, being derived from the name of Oporto, the town from which the wine is chiefly shipped. Brandy is Dutch, coming from brandewijn (brandy—burn, and wijn—wine).

You may not believe it, but the real name for gin is "Geneva"! Reference to any dictionary will bear this out. Gin comes from the Dutch genever—the juniper berry—the juniper being used to flavor the liquid that is distilled from grain. Because the Dutch specialize in its manufacture, it is also known as Hollands.

"The Borders"

The country lying south of Edinburgh, Scotland, is called "The Borders" and reveals the ancient castles and romantic monuments of the Middle Ages. In this area are the remains of Melrose, Jedburgh and Dryburgh Abbeys. A more modern note is in the district of the Abbotsford house, the manor built by Sir Walter Scott. Westward is the "Burns county," which attracts visitors as the birthplace of Scotland's great poet near Ayr.

Wells

Wells were primitive man's first means of obtaining water in places removed from lakes and streams. Arabs in the Sahara desert have dug them for centuries. The deeper the well the warmer the water, since the temperature of the earth increases toward the center. Artesian wells (so called because they were first extensively used in the French province of Artois) have been dug to supply warm water for heating hospitals, greenhouses and fishponds.

Greetings Among the Arabs

Among the Arabs of northern Africa, the ritual of greeting demands that the man "looking down" should always speak first, irrespective of his birth, wealth, power or dignity. Thus, notes a writer in Collier's Weekly, the man on a camel greets first the man on a horse, the horseback rider nods first to the mule rider, the mule rider bows first to the donkey rider, the donkey rider to the pedestrian and the pedestrian to the sitting man.

WORLD FLOCKS TO SEE BIRD PARADISE

Keeper of Aviary Makes Pets of Rare Kinds.

Vancouver, B. C.—True to its propensity for beating a path to the doorway of the innovator, the world is swinging from its wonted course to reach the door of Charles E. Jones, of Vancouver, whose bird paradise is the only thing of its kind in the world.

This unique aviary, where 50 varieties of small birds are raised "by hand," is situated in a small back yard, and the approaching visitor can hear the orchestra long before he is able to see the musicians.

This to guide him to the spot. When Mr. Jones established his aviary in 1930 he was returning to an early love. He was born in England fifty-eight years ago, and as a boy revealed his gifts as a naturalist. He used to amaze the grown-ups by keeping such groups of pets as a magpie, a jackdaw, a pair of pigeons, a fox terrier, a Persian cat and a Belgian hare all together in an enclosure. And they didn't fight!

Today he numbers his feathered friends in the hundreds. Besides hosts of canaries, he has dozens of varieties of native small birds, and many importations.

All of the birds are quite fearless. They swarm over Mr. Jones, his three sons, his dog and visitors. The robins tweak the lobe of your ear when told to "ring the bell." The meadow lark lies on his back and uses his claws in a sham boxing match with his master. The birds pry open your lips with their beaks to see if there are peanuts between your teeth.

The Lady Amherst cock pheasant—aristocrat and wildest thing of the pheasant tribe—eats nonchalantly from your hand without the formality of an introduction.

The diamond sparrow, native of Australia and so wild that in his native home he must be killed to be seen at close range, lights on your nose and peers impudently at you, his head on one side. Mr. and Mrs. Robin get their daily ration of worms for the family out of a pail held in the hand of Mr. Jones.

No Fear of People. The birds ask for no certificate of character. If Mr. Jones has admitted you, that is good enough for them. They swarm all over you, and you must place your feet carefully to avoid crushing them.

The raising of small birds in this way is frowned upon by the authorities. The bird books advise against it as a game that is "not worth the candle." But Mr. Jones has reduced the process to a fine art. His birds are every bit as healthy as those raised in the fields, and the infant mortality in his aviary is almost negligible.

Mr. Jones' is probably the most famous back yard on this continent. His birds have been the subject of three or four newsreels, and of a feature, "Going Places," now being screened.

Mr. Jones has had plenty of opportunities to turn his mastery of bird culture into cash, but he scorns commercialism. Many have tried to lure him into the commercial breeding of pet birds, and other ventures where the name of Jones on the doorplate would spell certain success. But to all such overtures he turns a deaf ear.

What he wants to do is exactly what he is doing now, but on a much larger scale. To raise birds, not in hundreds, but in thousands.

He envisions a huge aviary built in natural surroundings, such as the birds would choose for themselves. Here the student or tourist could study bird life at close range.

Gripping Movies Keep Air Conditioners Busy

Ann Arbor, Mich.—"Dripping," and not "gripping," is the word the air-conditioning engineer uses to describe a melodrama that has the customers sitting on the edges of their seats.

Normally the average adult evaporates off about a tenth of a pound of moisture an hour, but under the influence of torrid romance or gangster movie, this amount may increase by 50 per cent, according to Professor Axel Marin of the University of Michigan college of engineering.

On a summer day, if 1,000 persons are viewing a dull to medium picture, the ventilating system must take care of about 100 pounds of moisture per hour. But let G-men surround some crooks and start a convincing machine gun battle and the air-conditioning apparatus will have to handle 150 pounds of moisture.

Red Fingernails in Suit

San Francisco.—Just what tint of red finger nails justifies ejection from a public place is a question for the courts to decide. Mrs. Alta Moore has filed a $10,000 damage suit on the grounds she was ejected from a local sports stadium because she had "slaughterhouse fingernails."

Pay Boys to Attend School

Honolulu.—Hawaiian sugar planters have found one way to make boys attend school—and like it. They pay them for it.
