Prisoners of War Mail Must Be Properly Sent

Mail intended for prisoners of war in Germany and other Axis countries should be written on stationery designed especially for the purpose, issued free at the post office upon application, and should be mailed according to instructions.

Prisoner of war mail does not require postage, but the envelope must be placed in a larger envelope and addressed simply to the postmaster. Postage is not required on that envelope either.

The prisoner mail has to be handled carefully by the Post Office Department, and must not contain a stamp or postmark. Such mail will be handled as quickly as possible if properly prepared, but will be returned to the sender if instructions have not been carefully followed, it was announced.
