Mental Mazard

Driving a golf ball over a pond requires a type of skill altogether different from lifting it across a like-size patch of green grass. I don't know golf but men who play well have made me understand the difference. They call it a mental hazard, and life is full of them. A mental hazard seems to be something that offers a threat but presents no actual hindrance.

Observation makes me believe

Observation makes me believe that the magnitude of many world problems, currently discussed in print and on the air, creates a mental hazard. Utter bigness causes people to turn their thoughts away from facts that concern them vitally. Postwar planning is a good illustration. It is something that needs the serious attention of millions of thinking Americans.

Like Seeing Ghosts

I have heard several intelligent people recently talk as if postwar planning might be something outside of their world; a job for some mysterious committee of mental giants or supernatural beings. Actually, only a small part of postwar planning made to postwar planning made to postwar planning made to postwar planning. ning needs to be central planning. It is a job for us all and the sooner we start it the more promptly pros-perity will follow peace.

People who imagine they see ghosts are harmed as much by them as if they really existed. People who get alarmed at a big undertaking and run away from their part of it, are in much the same class. Planning is for everybody with a job, every firm with a business, every family with a farm. Things are going to be different soon, and we will need to be ready.

Millions Unemployed

Spectres of unemployment shaped in the smoke of war are scary enough to frighten even the wizard statisticians who know how to tame wild figures. That street corner estimate: "20 million without jobs," is probably 25% high. America has 40 million people working now at jobs they can keep after the war. After the war, however, 55 million will have to work if the nation prospers.

The difference is 15 million. This many will come from our armed forces and from war baby indus tries; too many to be idle. Fewer Fewer job hunters than that made 1932 a very bad year. But (not counting the jobs that will die with the war) our industries are using 40 million people now and should use 55 million in peacetime. It does not divide exactly even, but call it a gain of one man in four.

Intelligent Guessing

Men who won the war, men from uniform and men from munition plants, are returning to peacetime pursuits and we must have work for them. Anybody can plan on a one-man scale. The first step is for each of us in his own shop or of-fice to figure out about three things that might happen to his business when peace comes. Then line up these "could be" postwar changes in 1-2-3 order, the most likely one Step No. 2: Plan what's best to do in each of the three cases. Try to make plans justify four workers where three work now. Nobody can plan for you. Retody knows your business like you do. When war ends, every man should have quick access to his own deliberate thinking and he ready to welcome. thinking, and be ready to welcome peace. It is an idea for small business, but small firms normally em-ploy 85% of America's workers.

Kiwanians Have Ladies Night

Members of the Kiwanis club with their wives and families, enjoyed a Ladies' Night meeting in the Agriculture building Monday night.

Food was prepared and served buffet style by the wives. During the dinner music was furnished by Miss Jeanne hader at the piano, Dan Rader and Joseph Jarosz in a violin duet.

No formal program was presented.

Find Vitamin C Aids in

Healing Broken Bones Broken bones will not heal in the absence of vitamin C, and even a slight deficiency slows the healing, according to experiments just concluded by Dr. David M. Greenberg, professor of blochemistry at the University of California versity of California.

Dr. Greenberg and associates investigated the healing rates of broken bones in guinea pigs receiv-ing graded doses of vitamin C. They found that the bones did not They found that the bones did not heal at all when the animals re-ceived so little of the vitamin that they developed scurvy. With a somewhat larger dose of vitamin C the animals had mild scurvy and the bones healed very slowly. Mild vitamin C deficiency, known as subclinical scurvy, also caused slower bone healing than in the control animals which had adequate amounts of vitamin C in their food.

In addition, lack of this vitamin caused the bones to become more brittle and to break easier, the scientists found. Bones of animals which had mild cases of scurvy had about two-thirds the strength of bones of animals with plenty of vita-

Steaming Vegetables

Steaming is a good method for cooking such vegetables as carrots, beets, squash, parsnips, sweet potatoes, okra, and others. Green vegetables tables lose much color, however, when steamed for any length of time. Steaming requires a special type of container which many homes do not have. Cooking by steam in a pressure saucepan or a pressure cooker requires the shortest time for cooking. However, the higher temperature of steam under pressure makes it necessary to use care and accurate timing to avoid overcooking. The waterless cooker steams and cooks with the addition of little or no water, thus saving food values.

Any pan of heavy metal, which allows the heat to be evenly dis-tributed and which has a tightlyfitted lid may be used for so-called waterless cookery, or cooking of vegetables on top of the stove with the addition of just enough water to create steam.

WFA Invents New Cotton Sampling Device

Here's someting new in the sampling of cotton. Scientists in the War Food administration have invented a device for getting better samples of cotton and getting them more cheaply.

At regular intervals during the ginning of a bale of cotton this device takes a small but uniform amount of cotton out of the stream that is going into the bale. All these small amounts of cotton taken together make a truly representative sample of the bale. One of these uniform samples can be used to show to anyone who is interested in the bale

The usual custom in the cotton trade at the present time is to have Rationing News samples cut from the bale whenever there is a prospective change in ownership of the cotton. That, of course, means that after a few sales that the bale is disfigured and some of the cotton is lost.

Besides that, such samples frequently are not truly representative of the contents of the bale. Unless the cotton is exceptionally uniform, the sample may be cut from the poorer parts of the bale, or it may be cut from the better cotton in the

Rat Poisoning

The most popular method of rat control is poisoning, and if per-formed properly is very effective. The most successful poisons are bar-rium carbonate and red squill, which are used by mixing one part poison in 6 parts of hamburger, oatmeal, cheese, fresh grain or other bait. The baits are most attractive to the rat when about a teaspoon-ful is wrapped in paper enabling him to carry it to his hole. Prebaiting is frequently desirable, for it makes the rat familiar with the places where he will find food, and also removes his suspicion concern-ing the material. Pre-baiting for about one week before the poison is to be added is considered desirable.

More Flowers in the '45 Victory Garden

Grow bouquets as well as beans this coming season! Flowers can add plenty of pleasure and sest to the plainer duties of vegetable gardening. More beauty in gardens can definitely be classed as part of the "better gardens" program our government recommends for 1945.

Where space is limited, the simplest way is to devote a few rows to easy-to-

RENT CONTROL

All persons renting, or offering for rent, any living quarters whatsoever must register each dwelling unit with rent control office in their rent area. Persons who feel that they are being over-charged for rents may submit complaints to OPA. Complaint forms are available at the local War Price and Rationing Board if your area does not have a rent control office.

Rationing rules now require that each car owner write his license number and State on each coupon in his possession as soon as it is issued to him by his local rationing board.
