Undulant Socialism

A sick republic, like a human in valid, passes through a crisis in course of almost any protracted illness. After the crisis, the patient rallies toward recovery or sinks with alarming haste toward the end. Whatever is to be done after a crisis must be accomplished with dis-patch, or it is too late. The Eng-lish government passed through a crisis approximately a year ago.

Since England's current adminis-tration proclaimed itself owner and operator of the coal mines, Britain has been viewed popularly as So cialistic-one of the collectivist na-tions. Not all the individuals in the Empire are socialists. Large elements are not. But this large minority is being forgotten. Curtains are being drawn. The crisis is over and England has gone left.

A Long Time Dead.

There is something strangely final about it when a free people turns its course toward State Socialism. Liberty never comes back without a revolution and then it's not the same. Such is the testimony of re-corded history. Industrially, Eng-land is a coal country and private enterprise lost its last stronghold on the enchanted island when King Coal surrnedered.

Now the ailment that prostrated John Bull has been communicated to Uncle Sam. The symptoms are unmistakable as undulant fever; wave upon wave of collectivist pow-er, with a show of growing intensity. Our government has taken over our coal mines from their owners because of work stoppages through strikes—strikes by the best paid group of mine workers on

Here's the Pattern

I think perhaps the workers ought to have had an increase in pay, which they no doubt could have ob-tained without striking. Nevertheless, they struck and government took over the business long enough, at least, to close a new contract giving an increase of $1.85 a day per man and a royalty of 5c a ton on coal to give their union a "wel-fare" fund. The new "welfare" fund has no relation to the union's sick and accident fund, already

The new contract will raise the the price of coal 25c to 30c a ton and build up the "welfare" fund at the rate of 25 million dollars a year. The Senate has approved the executive department's right to imowners when they take their prop-erty back. This is an attack of the dulant socialism

Works Like This: Government can now control the cost of coal to the owner of a mine. By fixing labor's wage, a ruler can make coal production cost whatever suits his fancy. Government al-ready controls the price of coal to the consumer through the workings of the OPA. The neck of the coal industry is in a legal nut-cracker and government has the power to choke it to death at will—that, or

With the sanction of Congress which I hope never comes, federal officials can do to any industry what they are doing to coal. Each as-sault on freedom will be one more attack of the dread disease, undu-lant socialism. It works like the fever which, scientific men say, can be cured in rare instances if vigor ous treatment is begun in the early

Diabetes Takes Rising

Toll in This Country About four million people in the present population of the country will become diabetic some time during their lives, according to esti-mates made by statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company. The number of diabetics now is well above 500,000. Each year at least 50,000 persons are added to the list, while the reported number of deaths is about 40,000 annually.

The chances of eventually become ing diabetic are distinctly greater for women than for men. Of the population under 50, just over 4 per cent of the females and a little more than 2 per cent of the males will diabetic at some time.

One-half the total cases of dia betes in this country are concentrated at age 60 and over, though the population at these ages comprises only one-ninth of the total. One-fourth of the diabetics are under 50 years of age, while the remaining fourth are between 50 and 60. The rise in the diabetes onset rate with age is greater for women than for men. Between 40 and 50, the rate for women is more than twice that for men.

SPOT TO DECIDE ON PET WANTED

Gives Would-be Dog Owner Opportunity to Judge Breeds Side by Side

If in doubt as to the breed of dog to get, go see a dog show!

This is the advice given to wouldbe dog owners by the Gaines Dog Research Center, New York City. A visit to a dog show is a pleasurable opportunity to see and study at close range many of the 110 breeds recognized in this country by the American Kennel Club. Strolling past the "benches" is a fascinating as well as educational experience. Here are dogs from many countries, and dogs which for generations have been dogs which for generations have been bred to fulfill specific purposes or perform highly specialized jobs. Every dog here, from the most diminutive to the largest, is a purebred specimen of his breed, in blooming condition and groomed to perfection. Two or three hours thus spent in enjoyable sightseeing will not only facilitate a decision but in all probability also lead to contacts with ability also lead to contacts with those who have dogs of the breed de-cided on. It is well to remember that for each dog an exhibitor takes to a show, he usually has several at home.

The chances of seeing a dog show in one's own community have never in one's own community have never before been as good as in this year of 1946, states the Center. Figures from the American Kennel Club in-dicate that during the current year dog shows will reach a new all-time high Permission has been granted for 450 all-breed shows to be held during 1946, and this figure surpasses by over 100 the highest number of by over 100 the highest number of shows held in any pre-war year. The opportunity of viewing dogs on their benches is, of course, not all there is to a dog show. Equally in-teresting and thrilling—particularly to the seasoned show-goer and fancier-is to watch the actual judging Often a first-time spectator, after watching from the ringside awhile, will ask, "What is the judge looking for when he goes over the dogs? How does he compare them?" The answer is that each breed has its own official Standard which describes in detail the conformation and qualities that the conformation and qualities that constitute a faultless specimen, and that when the judge examines the dogs in the ring before him—inspects their teeth, feels their muscles and watches them walk back and forth-he is simply trying to determine which dog comes closest to measur-ing up to this Standard.

Another frequent inquiry from spectators is, "How is the best dog in the show selected? By what procedure is one dog lifted out of several hundred to be crowned Best in Show?"

A dog show is a sort of elimination A dog show is a sort of elimination contest. First, there is judging of various classes in the individual breeds (Puppy, Novice, American-Bred, Limit and Open), segregated by sex. The winners of first prize in each class then compete for Winners Dog (male) or Winners Bitch (female). The winner of this class receives a certain number of points toward his or her championship title, which are figured in proportion to the number of dogs he or she dethe number of dogs he or she de-feated in the classes. Winners Dog and Winners Bitch are now matched for Best of Winners, and the winner of this class meets whatever champions of the breed are entered in the Specials Only class for title Best of Breed. By the time Best of Breed has been chosen for every breed repre-sented in the show, perhaps only 40 or 50 dogs out of an original entry of five or six hundred remain eligi-ble to contend for higher honors.

Now begins the judging of the six variety groups, called Sporting, Hound, Working, Terrier, Toy and Non-sporting. Only the Best of Breed winners are eligible for competition winners are eligible for competition within their special group; consequently group contests are very keen and the quality of the contestants of the highest order. The six dogs that are placed first in each of these groups are then brought together to contend for the final and highest honor of Best in Show. This is the climax of the judging and the most exciting part of the show. Amid tension that almost crackles, the six finalists are examined, gaited and reexamined. Finally one of them is motioned to the center of the ring amid cheers and applause, to take his place in the limelight as champion of champions—Best in Show!

Your New Home Lighting System for Each Room Should Be Carefully Planned

By W. WADSWORTH WOOD

THE average American home is cast over entire wall and ceiling a greaty lacking in proper illumination. A couple of outlets in each room, a few ceiling brackets, and a number of "occa-number of "occa-sional" lamps dis-tributed about the house constitute the normal provisions for lighting. It is an error to feel that you enjoy modern lighting simply because you have electric lights. have

Many homes built today are illumi-nated according to the standards prevailing 20 years ago.

Too often lighting is a last-minute thought, installed at minimum cost with little consideration for convenience and efficiency. The disap-pointing result is glare, harsh shadows and eyestrain. In the days when people lived mostly outdoors and went to bed at sundown, very little interior illumination was required. Today the indoor and afterdark demands placed on our eyes have increased a thousand-fold, without a corresponding increase in planned lighting. As a result, we are fast becoming a nation of "eye-

Proper light conditioning pro duces a multitude of benefits. In-creased comfort can be assured for every room by a careful selection of lighting fixtures. If your eyes are not subjected to strain, you can read, sew or mend in complete relaxation. Good lighting will bring out the best features of your home Good lighting will bring emphasize decorative details, estab-lish moods, intensify color. It can bring cheer to a room like sunlight on a bright day. The proper fixon a bright day. The proper fix-ture installation will eliminate any necessity for constantly shifting lamps and furniture. And a most important feature: Sufficient light-ing will assure safety in halls and

There are two principal types of light available for use today. The newer fluorescent tubes and their special fixtures involve somewhat greater initial cost, but increased efficiency at lower current cost soon equalizes this expense and effects a definite economy. They produce a white light similar to daylight, and can be obtained in three tones of varying warmth. The softer fluorescent glow requires less shading, and the long tubes give a handsome decorative effect. They are ideal for general illumination purposes, areas. Incandescent bulbs produce warm er tones with a larger proportion of red and yellow rays. Due to their greater compactness and brilliance, it is preferable for specific working areas.

The ideal way to plan your home lighting is first to decide on an overall lighting system for each room-either a recessed light in the cen ter of the ceiling or an indirect light trough running around the cornice.
This basic illumination can be equipped with a dimmer to vary the light according to mood; quite bright for entertaining and dimmer for quiet conversation. The next step is to analyze your specific requirements for concentrated, direct light in places where activities such as reading, sewing and laundering

Nation-wide surveys have been conducted to determine what specific lighting conveniences people desire in their homes today. Many of these you may wish to incorporate in your own plans. The list includes fluorescent shaving lights flanking the bathroom mirror, fluo-rescent lights for the entrance, built-in closet lights and flood lights for illuminating the outside yard at night. Plenty of lighting for working areas is desired, such as a light bracket over the kitchen sink. Reading lights for the bedroom should be adjustable so that one person can read while another sleeps. Hospi tal night-lights for the nursery, and stairway lights of the theater-aisle variety are among those listed.

One of the cheapest luxuries one can buy is adequate light. The expense of a closet light, for example, is trifling in comparison with the inconvenience of going without it. Approximately 11/2 per cent of the cost of your home should be allocated for lighting, and surey this will prove a small expenditure for especialy when installed in con-cealed recesses so that the glow is happiness.

Uncle Sam Says

There is something about Niagara Falls which symbolizes a strong, happy future.

If we had been here a year ago, all our thoughts world have been about backing our fighting men. Americans bought as many war bonds as possible to help win the war. Today, your Government is still selling United States Savings Bonds. To you and every June bride and bridegroom I say with all my heart: Now Back Your Future.
