In Europe

Leaving New York at eleven o'clock A. M., I flew to London in just 20 hours. A flight to London shows how the world is growing smaller. Our relations with other countries are becoming much more intricate as the globe shrinks, and our great need is better understanding which will beget wisdom.

For 20 years I have had a great personal interest in studying the secret of national prosperity, which of course is the sum of each individual's prosperity within the nation. This interest was first awakened when in 1925 I observed the poverty of China for the first time.

More Than Resources

Countries having equal resources are not always equally prosperous. That is an axiom most of our people accept readily. They have come to know, sometimes subconsciously, that our democracy is mixed of more, and perhaps finer, ingredients than statistical reports of national resources will show.

Surely, what makes one nation happy, peaceful, wealthy, need not make another nation troublesome and ripe for revolution from within. Truly, there are many ingredients in the recipe for national well-being.

Like Good Deeds

Today, when the popular catchword, even internationally, is "security," we know that one of the most valued ingredients is prosperity. If people everywhere could understand and achieve the conditions necessary for prosperity, every home-neighbor and every world-neighbor would benefit. This is like a good deed that pays off for everybody.

Currently, the writer is concluding a stay of eight weeks in Europe, the full benefit of which the readers of this column will have opportunity to share. On the itinerary are England, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, and France.

What is the Secret?

The objective is to study political, economic, social, and religious conditions in each country, with a hope of arriving at definite and significant conclusions regarding the secret of individual and national prosperity.

If we can be sure why it is that American wage earners and farmers can purchase with their earnings two times as much food, clothing, shelter, and transportation as the workers on any other continent can purchase with their wages, we shall then understand the factors we must preserve as vital to all of us in our period of reconstruction.

For awhile, I would like to be your European observer, for it is my conviction that some important lessons can be pointed up by studying our continental neighbors. Ours is a great economy. If we in America can have enough foresight to co-operate for the sake of production, our land can long remain the land of freedom and plenty.

Beginning next week, this column will survey postwar England, and will then proceed with some significant observations of continental nations.

Uncle Sam Says

Any number of my young nephews today dream of banging the ball out of the park in a World Series. A big league baseball career is a fine future for any American boy, but so is a career as a lawyer, a doctor, an engineer or some other profession. The big leaguers among dads know that it costs money to give their sons the opportunity for a great career. By investing every pay day in United States Savings Bonds, any dad can give Junior a good start in life. Yes, Savings Bonds are in the big league class. Buy an extra Savings Bond today. U. S. Man with a 32-track mind

He's moved upstairs . . . this Southern Railway yardmaster!

Yesterday he ran his legs off in all kinds of weather trying to be all over his yard at once. Today he sits in a glass-enclosed, air-conditioned tower sixty feet above the ground acres of tracks spread out before him.

Through the magic of electronics he gives orders and instructions to switching crews and others throughout the yard . . . and the man can report back to him over this two-way communication system . . . thus speeding the "making up" into trains of as many as 5,000 freight cars a day.

Progress? You bet!

Always on the alert for new methods . . . never taking anything for granted . . . we're doing our best to provide the kind of mass transportation service that is so vital to the continued growth and prosperity of the South.

Whether it's pioneering with the first Diesel freight locomotive or building a tower for the "man with a 32-track mind," the Southern Railway is . . . and will continue to be . . . a railway that is always looking for, and finding, better ways to "Serve the South."
