In some quarters we see it stated that Oliver Buckley is a member of the Farmers' Alliance, and that the republicans are insisting that members of that organization vote to make him the radical governor of this State.

Such projects, like other best laid schemes of men and mice, will gang aft agree.

The alliance, if we know the sterling material of which this organization is composed, will not permit itself nor will the individuals composing it permit themselves, to be made the political tools of any political demagogues. The Alliance and its members will pull no political chestnuts out of the fire.

The alliance will be true to its principles, and will maintain them.

One of these is the non political feature.

"My Son Oliver" is not built this way. He is a member of the Alliance whose declare principles are at variance, and opposite to the platform of the party of which he is the head.

It is only necessary to name one protection. A cardinal principle of the alliance is against protection. The issue joined by the republicans with the Democrats, is one favoring protection by the former.

The soon candidate for governor cannot honestly believe and live up to the principles to which he subscribes in the alliance, and at the same time accept and stand on the radical platform.

When he accepts the republican nomination tendered him by a lot of darkies and renegade white men, he renounces his principles as a member of the alliance, and when his friends ask that organization to support him they answer such and every member of it. They take honest yeomanry of this State to be mere policy men, time-servers, regardless of principle, vacillate as the wind, in a word, hypocrites.

During the last few months the members of the alliance have made overtures to the white men of the state to join them in their organization.

The personnel of the order is too intelligent to be led astray by any contumacious or a demagogue, too

minister. The times has not published any news to the contrary.
