we of humanity as it is than any other class of men. but 1 question' if the endless panorama of incidents typifying the different phases of human life is witnessed by any class that every day passes before bankers. Sometimes whole stories are enacted before us spread over a term of years. I am the repository of one such story that I watched from its beginning to its elimax. One afternote a weather beaten old farmer with silky white hair scattered over his head came to my desk and. pulling out a wallet, asked for a draft on Denver for $200 in favor of Thomas Williams. He counted out the money. and then, having nothing to do while the draft was being prepared, began to tell me the beginning of this story. "I'm sendin' the money." he said. "to my boy out in Colorado. He went out there a year ago, takin' some money with him that 1 give him, but he hasn't had much luck, and it's all gone. Firs, he got sick; then when he got well he went prospectin' and struck somephi that looked good, but some other fellers jumped his claim, whatever that means and took it will whatever that means, and took it all away from him.

"Then Tom got sick ag'in and went to a horsepittle and stayed there three months. Now he's got out of the horsepittle and lookin' about for some pin. I'm sendin' this money to give him a chapet. Tom's his mother's pet. and she lays awake nights worritin about him. I'm mighty fond of the boy myself somehow. He was always a smart little chap-took lots of prizes and things at schule.

"When he got old enough to work I wanted him to help me on the farm He tried it for awhile, but I see purty quick he didn't take to it. He was too smart to be contented to follow a plow same 's his father, who didn't never get no eddication: So 1 says to him one day: 'Tommy, reckon you'd better go to the city and work that a-way. This don't suit you.' He was mighty well pleased at that. It al-most broke ma's heart to part with conquered. him, but she knowed it was better for him and let him go.

"Tom didn't like it in town sq well as he thought he would. Leastaways he didn't stay long in the place he went into. They must 'a' thought a heap of him, though, for they raised he got into a fight with one of the head clerks and got himself discharged. He said the head clerk accused him of stealin' some money.

"Tom was allus an ambitious little chap, and after leavin' his place he concluded he'd go west and try and do*somepin big. for mn and me agin we got too o'd to work. So we scraped up $500 and give it to him; and he"-At this moment a clerk laid the farmer's draft on my desk, and the first chapter of his story was finished. for he began to count over his soiled and torn bills, now and again wetting his thumb on his lip as he turned them Then, leaving them to me and carefully folding his draft, he put it in his wallet, crammed the wallet down into the bottom of his pocket and with a "Goodby, Mr. Cashier." left the bank.

The second chapter of the story is very short. There is hirdly enough in it to make a chapter, but there is a good deal beneath the few words re-quired to tell it. A girl of eighteen came to the bank, laid down $24, near ly all in silver coin, and asked for a we kin jest now, but hope to send him some more blme by. We had some money saved up for old age, but we've been adrawin' on it for Tom, and this is all there is left." When she went out with her draft

I found myself boiling with indigna tionbut this worthless scamp, who was sucking the lifeblood out of his old father and mother-even his sweetheart.

There was a visit from the sweetheart after this to ask; for a draft of $18.50, which convinced me that Tom had accepted the last amount she had Then one day the old farmer came in pale and trembling, evident-ly just out of a sickbed, with the check of a mortgage company for $1. 000. He asked for a draft in exchange for it payable to this vampire of a son We bankers make it a rule to mind our own, business, but I had reached a point where I could no longer refrain from warning this poor old man, "So you have mortgaged your farm to send money to your son?" I said. "Yes: Tom's lu powerful need of money. The mine he thought was goin' to turn out so fine petered out. He says it closed up as he went down instead of openin'."

"And you lost all the money you sent him for the development?" "Yes, we lost it." replied the old man with a tremulous voice "Aren't you afraid you'll lose this too?"

"I dunno. Tom's got another mine He says be's sure o' this."

"Of course it's no business of mine. but i don't ilke to see you, an old man, mortgaging your farm to send meney to a sop who should be giving you money instead of you giving it to him. Suppose you can't pay the interest on the mortgare when it is due. You will lose your farm."

The old man stood wiping his face with a bandanna handkerchief, the pictufe of misery. "I know what yer mean," he said.

"but ma she won't keep back any-thing the boy wants. She never did I always told her she'd spoll him." "I'm afraid she has spolled him.

You should know that your son is not wasting, your money at gambling or something like that and telling you that he's on the verge of making a fortune in a mine before risking any more money on him.

"That's what I tell ma." At this moment the draft was laid before me, but instead of handing it to him I said: bim I said: "Hadn't you better think this over?"

He stood, his eyes fixed on vacancy. slowly swaying or tottering, and knew there was a great contest going on in his mind. His love for his boy

"I'm 'bliged to you, Mr. Cashler.' and mebbe you're right, but I allus belleved in my Tom, and I can't go back on him now

I handed him the draft, and he scuffled slowly out of the bank.

The old man-must have borrowed his salary twice, so he wrote me. But all he could on his farm, considering the transaction as a sale; for he fatled to pay the first interest that fell due on the mortgage. I knew this, because I saw in a newspaper a legal notice of foreclosure proceedings on his farm.

"Well." I sighed, laying down the paper, "the old man has given his home to his reprobate son; he has nothing more to give. I shall not suf-fer again at seeing him come into the bank to do what I can't prevent his doing." The same day I met the young girl on the street whom I was sure was Tom's sweetheart. I stopped her and asked "Is Farmer Williams turned out of house and home?"

"Not yet, sir." "But he will be?" "I suppose so."

"Has his son sent him anything to help him ?"

"No.' sir. He wrote to say that he was awful sorry to see the farm go. but he could not help it."

"H'm. Do you think a son who will treat his father and mother like that "To whom will you have it made Tears came into her eyes. 1

LIFE'S UPS AND DOWNS. The Magnificent Revenge of a Governor at Missouri

While Robert Stewart was governor of Missouri a steamboat man was brought in from the penitentiary as an applicant for a pardon. He was a large, powerful fellow, and when the governor looked at him he seemed strangely affected. He scrutinized the man long and closely. Finally he signed the document that restored the prisoner to liberty. Before he handed is to him he said, "You will commit some other crime and be in the peniten-tiary again, I fear."

The man solemnly promised that he would not. The governor looked doubtful, mused a few minutes and said: "You will go back on the river and be a mate again. I suppose?" The man replied that he would,

"Well, I want you to promise me one thing," resumed the governor. "I want you to pledge your word that when you are mate again you will never take a billet of wood in your hand and drive a sick boy out of a bunk to help you load your boat on a stormy night.'

The steamboat man said he would not and inquired what the governor meant by asking him such a question

The governor replied: "Because some day that boy may become a governor, and you may want him to pardon you for a crime. One dark, stormy night. many years ago, you stopped your boat on the Mississippi river to take on a load of wood. There was a boy on board who was working his passage from New Or-leans to St. Louis, but he was very sick of fever and was lying in a bunk. You had plenty of men to do the work, but you went to that boy with a stick of wood in your hand and drove him with blows and curses out into the wretched night and kept him toiling like a slave until the load was completed. I was that boy. Here is your pardon. Never again be guilty of such brutality." The man, cowering and hiding his face, went out without a word. -Exchange.

Origin of "Whig." Several reasons have been assigned to account for the word "Whig." By some the word is supposed to be a contraction of a longer one. "whiggamore," which in some parts of England and Scotland, especially Scotland, signifies a drover or herder. It was in 1679 that the word first became common in the British isles, when the struggle was in progress between the peasantry and the aristocracy to have or not to have the bill passed by parlia-ment to exclude the Duke of York from the line of succession. who were opposed to placing the duke in the line of succession were derisively called "whiggamores," or drovers. But Scotch tradition gives a different reason for the existence of the word. -It is this: During the early religious wars in Scotland the weakest of the factions used the words "We Hope In God" as a motto. The initials of these words were placed on their banners, thus, "W. H. I. G.," and soon all the folward attached as a party nickname.

Perfectly Frank.
