

Are You Trying to Farm Without Sufficient Power?

As a general rule, we believe that, notwithstanding the greater first cost, it is cheaper for a man to do his work with improved and elaborate than with crude and simple implements. The most expensive plowing is not that done with a big gang and a gasoline engine, but that done with one little mule and a one-horse plow. It is cheaper to use the binder and the threshing machine than the sickle and the flail.

This is why we believe it is to the interest of the farmer to unload just as many as possible of his tasks on the machine. Why we have urged him to get the stumps out of his fields and fill up the ditches and use bigger plows and harrows and cultivators and more harvesting machinery; why we have advised him to put the burden of just as many as possible of the tasks in and about the home upon various machines—the pump, the cream separator, the washing machine, etc.—instead of upon his wife and children. And since to run all this machinery power of some sort—horse, steam, gasoline, electric—is a necessity, we would insist again that no reader make the mistake of trying to run his farm without sufficient power. Many implements which might be used to advantage on their farms, many farmers must wait for because they can get along fairly well without them, and because they have not at present the money with which to buy them; but we doubt if it pays any farmer to "economize" in power. The insufficiency of the work stock on most Southern farms makes the cheapest and the most effective farming impossible, and along the same line we would call attention to the many exacting and wearisome tasks on the average farm which could be done with a small gasoline engine to the great relief, as well as to the financial benefit, of the farmer and his family. There are some farms where by taking advantage of a waterpower now going to waste, an electric motor could be made to do economical and wonderfully useful service; but on most farms the gasoline engine is probably the best source of power for the doing of the numerous "odd jobs" and for some of the study ones. We do not believe it is too much to say that every well equipped farm should have an engine or motor of some kind; and that this power should be considered along with the question of more team force.—Raleigh (N. C.) Progressive Farmer.

Mr. Pace Dead.

On Wednesday morning February 22nd 1911, this community and surrounding country was shocked upon hearing that Mr. Bryant W. Pace, of Hayville township, had committed suicide at his home by hanging himself, in his cotton house by using a rope that was formerly used for weighing cotton and left tied to the beam of the house. Stepping upon a lime barrel placing his head through the rope and jumping off causing his neck to be broken instantly. Mr. Pace had been in bad health for six months or more, having softening of the brain and other complications which was accountable for his act. He has been under the constant watch of his family for a long time they knowing he was not himself at any time. On the morning of the 22nd he got up early made a fire in the range as usual and went to feed the hogs and came back through the cook room and went to his room to warm, but stayed only a few minutes then went back through the cook room where his wife was and on out of doors. His son Mr. S. A. Pace went in the cook room and asked his mother where father was she said he had just gone out of doors, and his son went to look for him finding him hanging just inside the cotton house door. He rushed to him lifted him up and called for his brother, Mr. B. N. Pace and together they took him to the house only a few steps away. But they were too late his soul had flown to the God that gave it.

Mr. Pace was 61 years old, born in Franklin county was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Pace. He was married April 7th 1870 to Miss Isabell F. Fuller and their union was blessed with thirteen children ten boys and three girls. About 30 years ago he joined old Plank Chapel M. E. church and has since then lived a consistent christian life. For many years he was steward of his church filling the position with entire satisfaction to all. He was an honest and upright man entirely devoted to his family and fellow man and was highly respected by the community at large.

He leaves a heart-broken wife, eight sons and two daughters to mourn their loss, Messrs. H. A. Pace, Henderson, N. C., J. W. Pace, O. V. Pace, S. A. Pace, C. R. Pace, Durham, N. C., B. N. Pace, H. F. Pace, J. C. Pace, Mrs. A. B. Pleasant, Kittrell, N. C., Miss Annie Pace.

To his many friends we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

Garden Manures and Fertilizers.

Stable manure is excellent for the garden, of course, but annual manuring with stable manure only will soon get an excess of nitrogen in the soil, and you will find that your potatoes run to tops and make small potatoes, and that your tomatoes grow too rankly and make too many imperfect fruits. Now I do not advise stopping the use of stable manure on the garden, but I do advise making it a better balanced plant food. It is deficient especially in phosphoric acid, and its efficiency will be greatly promoted by mixing at least 100 pounds of acid phosphate to every ton of the manure. Then if the liquid portion of the manure has been carefully saved, there will not be much deficiency in potash, but on sandy soils it is better to add some muriate of potash, say 20 pounds to the ton of manure. Now, while I do not think that for ordinary farm crops it pays to compost and fine the manure, it does pay for the garden. I would pile the manure now and scatter the acid phosphate and potash through it, placing it in a broad, flat heap. As soon as signs of heating show, turn it and repile it in the same flat heap. Then make layers of fine black mould from the woods six inches thick, and cover with a layer of the mixed manure of some thickness and carry the heap up, in this way keeping it broad and flat. If heating shows, chop this all down and mix completely and repile it in the flat heap. In this way you will soon have a heap of fine and well decomposed compost that will be more readily available to the plants than fresh manure. For my garden I get the stable manure from New York City. His has a great deal of hay and straw mixed in it, and it is important to get this fine before applying it to the soil.—W. F. Do you know that of all the minor ailments colds are by far the most dangerous? It is not the cold itself that you need to fear, but the serious diseases that it often leads to. Most of these are known as germ diseases. Pneumonia and consumption are among them. Why not take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and cure your cold while you can? For sale by all dealers.
