HOMES OF THE FUTURE.

If in the next few years this country does not show a much larger per cent of its families owning their own homes than at present, the reason will be the reason that our people are losing their appreciation of home and the pleasures of domesticity.

The present high prices in all lines, and more especially those of labor and farm products, are resulting in the common people of the land coming to more easy circumstances than ever before in our history. The man who can not now live and lay by a little money is rare. Bank accounts are being accumulated by men who heretofore have never known what it meant to have money ahead.

Now the country that enjoys the soundest prosperity, the prosperity that makes for stability and permanency, is that country wherein the greatest per cent of its people own their own homes. The feel of one's own soil under one's feet imparts a sense of oneness with the things about us that nothing else can give. John Howard Payne touched a human chord that moved the world when he penned the immortal line, "There's no place like home."

There is absolutely no reason, unless it be disinclination, why thousands upon thousands of families that have heretofore been renters, should not make the efforts to own their homes. Real estate values are still very reasonable in many parts of the country, and nowhere are they as high as in many other lines. Then the risk is not great, as all indications point to a long period of the present high prices and strong demand for all the products of human labor. In former times many men were reluctant to assume property indebtedness, owing to the fact that none could tell at what time the bottom would drop out of the prosperity of the country and they left stranded. But this has no force now. Even if the war were to end this year, conditions in Europe would demand all of our surplus for several years to come, and prices and demand would continue active.

The man who is making a surplus will be recreant to his duty to himself, to his family and to his country if he lets this opportunity pass to establish himself as one of the substantial permanent assets of his country.
