Mr. Harding may again change his practical mind, says the Brooklyn Eagle sarcastically. The facility with which it can be changed is the most practical thing about it.

The Greeks in their election paid us the doubtful compliment of imitating what we had done in ours.

A Southern Republican has about as much chance of being made Secretary of Agriculture as Lloyd George has of being elected President of Ireland.

One thing that will facilitate Harding's efforts to make his administration successful is that the G. O. P. victory was so sweeping it left him almost no Republican lame ducks to provide for.

Smooth seas have favored Mr. Harding on his Panama voyage. Very different from the stormy one he must sail when he takes office in Washington.
