W. C. Durant's masterpiece has, like its predecessor, the Durant Four, smashed all former sales records. The instant approval and warm reception accorded its appearance throughout the country far exceeding even the hopes of its creator. There's a reason—yes, several of them! We invite inspection and comparison, unit by unit, with any other car within one hundred dollars of its price.

With a quiet, smooth-running Red Seal Continental Motor, instantly responsive to the touch of the driver, topping any hill "on high," throttling down to a walk without a buck or quiver—a "pick up" like a twin-six—it's a delight to drive—and, besides, it's economical, too. Not a car built to meet a price—but a car built to meet any demand of its owner under any and all conditions. Built to serve and to save!

HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Information Concerning The Health of the People of Franklin County, Worth Your Attention.
Dr. J. E. Malone, Health Officer.

What is quarantine and what does it do? Quarantine was not intended to protect the afflicted as it does for the people of the surrounding community. Let us here illustrate an almost perfect quarantine against one of the terrible contagious diseases, Take Diphtheria. If we have a good and efficient Public Health system, there is no need to have any of these contagious and infectious diseases after the first case. A study now of the Wilson case. The public nurse noticed Sam Wilson looking drowsy one morning, stopped him looked at his throat, found it inflamed, also dull eyes. She gave him a card to take to his mother at once, telling his mother to call in the family physician. The doctor came, took a test of Sam's throat, and on examination he found Diphtheria germs. He told Mrs. Wilson to put Sam in a room to himself. Mrs. Wilson's daughter Mary 18, was usher in a moving picture show. Having a son working in a grocery store, Susan a daughter was going to school. Jim Half came in the evening to help work the boys wagon, a big boy. The children were all sent home from school and the grocery store. The teachers and nurse selected the pupils at school who had been in most direct contact with Sam at school and his desk mates and close class neighbors, also the boys and girls and those with whom he had played. These children were sent home with a note to their parents stating that these boys and girls had been exposed to Diphtheria and for the safety of the school they should be kept at home until the period of incubation had passed (a matter of ten days.) These boys and girls could remain at home for ten days or be protected by taking Diphtheria Anti-toxin. If they took this treatment they would not have to miss school, but a few days. Mrs. Wilson kept Sam off in a room to himself and over his door she hung a blanket saturated in a solution of Bichloride of Mercury. She had special cups, plates, knives and forks for Sam and after using she always put them in boiling water. No one used these but Sam the patient, no one entered Sam's room but the Doctor and nurses. In this way thorough quarantining kept the disease in Sam's room and the community and school was protected. In obeying the Health laws, the Wilson's performed a fine civic service and prevented the spread of a dangerous disease. After raising the quarantine, the children all went back to work and school and there was no more Diphtheria. But what did Mrs. Wilson do, she scowered and washed those walls, opened all windows and doors and let the fresh air and sunshine do their work of further disinfecting. If you gave your neighbor candy with poison on it you would be arrested and put in jail. The germs of contagious diseases are poisons of a most dangerous sort. They carry suffering and death broadcast. If you caught your neighbor putting Arsenic in your drinking water you would certainly appeal to the Law. Why not appeal to the Law when he scatters germs as deadly as Arsenic.
