CRANMER RULES AGAINST PERSON
Suit Involving Exemption Of Foreign Stocks Now Goes to Supreme Court

Former State Senator Willie M. Person, of Franklin county, was yesterday thrown out of court in his effort to have the enactment of the 1923 General Assembly exempting stock in foreign corporations from taxation declared unconstitutional.

The hearing which was held before Judge E. H. Cranmer in Wake Superior Court, got away to a slow start but got ended abruptly, Judge Cranmer declaring after over an hour of argument that he had made up his mind sustaining the demurrer filed by Assistant Attorney General Frank Nash. Senator Person announced his intention to carry the case to the Supreme Court at the Fall term.

Senator Person had evidently prepared himself for a big oratorical effort. The hearing was in chambers and therefore out of the province of the court stenographer. However, Senator Person had secured a public stenographer in order that his speech might be preserved in full. The Senator slowed down but was soon absorbed in his own eloquence and going at top speed again, with the result that the young lady gave it up as a hopeless job and there is no record of the oratorical effort.

About the time his stenographer left him, the plaintiff aroused the ire of the court by declaring that the opinion of the Supreme Court in the case of Person vs. Watts was "a logical absurdity and a legal monstrosity." Judge Cranmer's decision followed immediately upon this outburst.

Tax upon stocks in domestic corporations have been paid by the corporations since 1887, but stocks in foreign corporations have been made taxable in the hands of the holder. The last General Assembly reversed this policy and exempted foreign stocks from taxation.

Last fall Senator Person endeavored to have the exemption of domestic stocks declared unconstitutional and brought a suit seeking a mandamus compelling A. D. Watts, Commissioner of Revenue, to have the stocks listed for taxation. A demurrer was filed by the Attorney General and sustained by Judge T. H. Calvert. When the case reached the Supreme Court on appeal, that tribunal declared that Senator Person was not properly in court but proceeded to decide the question on account of its great importance, holding the statute then in effect valid.

Shortly after the adjournment of the legislature, Senator Person sought a mandamus from Commissioner R. A. Doughton compelling the listing of stocks in foreign corporations, but the hearing was continued from time to time until yesterday.

Both Senator Person and Assistant Attorney General Nash relied yesterday upon the decision in Person vs. Watts. Mr. Nash contended that the former decision of the court makes the present action demurrable on the grounds that Senator Person has mistaken both his forum and his remedy.

The plaintiff contended that in passing upon the merits of the former case the court supported his present position. According to Senator Person the former case was decided on the grounds of long acquiescence and the fact that a tax upon the stock is paid by the corporation, neither of which can be urged in support of the present law.

It is expected that if the present suit fails on technicalities that another suit will be started to test the validity of the foreign stock enactment. —News and Observer, June 21st.
