Don't burn the woods trying to kill a few boll weevils. The woods will suffer much more than the weevil, says Forester H. M. Curran of the State College extension service.

Tom Tarheel says that North Carolina seems destined to be a great poultry producing State. Everywhere he goes now folks are talking about pure bred eggs, incubators and poultry marketing associations.

Farmers in Cherokee county are organizing a Veal Producers Association through which they plan to market those calves which do not have quality enough to carry to maturity, reports County Agent H. H. Ellis.

Poultry club members in North Carolina entered eleven birds at the Madison Square Garden poultry show in New York City last week.

CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS

The Carolina Playmakers, the well known dramatic organization of the University of North Carolina on their Seventh State Tour will appear here February 13th, at the high school under the auspices of the Woman's Club in three original Folk-Plays of North Carolina life.

Following a performance in Chapel Hill on February 8th and 9th, The Playmakers will include the following towns in their itinerary: Louisburg, Feb. 13, Smithfield Feb. 14, Kinston Feb. 15, Newbern Feb. 16, Elizabeth City Feb. 18, Edenton Feb. 19, Scotland Neck (pending) Feb. 20, Raleigh (pending) Feb. 21.

The plays selected for this tour make a varied and most interesting bill. THE BLACK ROOSTER, a comedy of tenant farm life, by Pearl Setzer, was the most popular of the three plays presented on the Sixth State Tour last Fall. FIXIN'S the second play, is a tragedy, by Erma and Paul Green. Paul Green is one of the most distinguished playwrights the organization has yet developed, and his works are now published by the Atlantic Monthly, and other leading periodicals. Miss Erma Green, his sister, came to the University to study playwriting and production, and write FIXIN'S in collaboration with her brother. GAJUS AND GAJUS, JR., a farce comedy by Lucy M. Cobb, was a great success when presented on tour last Fall, which is the main reason for its revival for this bill. A selected group of the best players available have been chosen to present these plays. An unusual amount of versatility is displayed by these young actors in doubling in two or three parts in the different plays on the same program.
