Unless You Possess Good Table Glassware

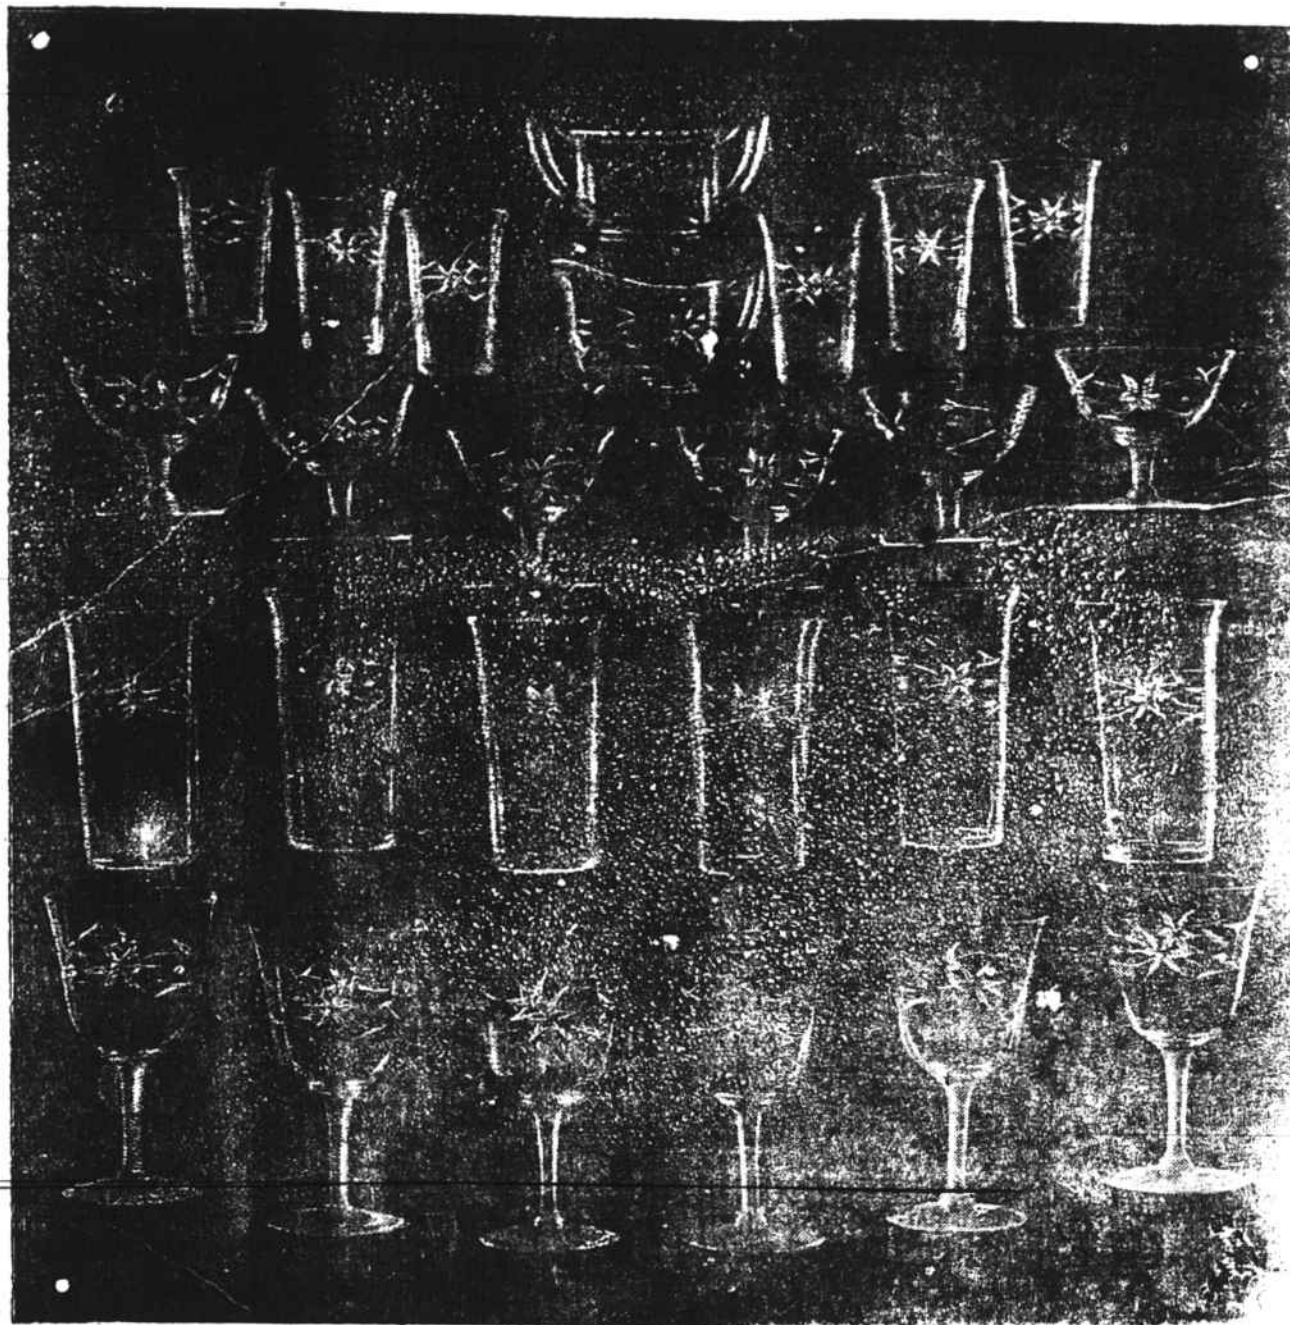

Your home is not complete. No matter how well furnished your house may be, how excellent your china, how shiny your silver, unless you have a complete service of clear, sparkling glassware your friends will mark the omission. Good taste and refinement are evidenced in the possession of good glassware, each article for its particular purpose, but all alike in design and matching as to shape.

This is fine hand-made, lead blown glass, every piece carefully made by an American workman, in one of the largest and oldest glass plants in the United States. Each Goblet and Sherbet has a hand drawn, one piece stem and bowl, the feet being also hand made. Each Tumbler is hand blown.

The clear whiteness of the wonderful crystal has built up a reputation for the manufacturer over a period of thirty-five years. The engraving on each item is genuine hand cutting in a beautiful pattern of floral band, with two large poinsettias in tiny fine lines, joined by interlacing stems, leaves and buds, into an exquisite design in gray relief against the shining crystal.

Price similar glassware in the stores and you will realize—
