THOU ART THE MAN

"AND NATHAN SAID TO DAVID, 'THOU ART THE MAN.' "—II SAMUEL, 12-7

There is a man in The Old North State who appreciates a good banking connection. He wants his bank to be a bank of service—a bank always interested in community development. His bank must be progressive, and aggressive, yet conservative at all times.

There is a man in Franklin County who values a banking home. He values his bank for many reasons in addition to the service of receiving his deposits, and transferring funds at his orders.

There is a man in Louisburg who knows that the FIRST NATIONAL BANK has faithfully served the public for many years; counselled patrons, and led them safely through panics and times of stress.

There is a man on YOUR STREET who knows the First National Bank is a sturdy institution, which has kept abreast of the times, constantly equipping itself, as it grew, and kept growing, that it could properly serve its patrons. That man knows the First National is a good bank in which to rear his children, that they, in turn, may enjoy the friendship of a strong bank, in the years to come.

THOU ART THE MAN!

The First National Bank
