STREET CARS MOST RELIABLE

Something new in the battle between street cars and auto buses has developed in Emporia, Kansas...

Emporia is probably the first city in the United States to be faced with making the decision for or against buses or street cars...

As evidence of this, witness the New York and Chicago bus lines, the largest in this country, which have a ten-cent fare for much shorter hauls than can be secured on street railways...

Britton I. Budd, president of the American Electric Railway Association, points out that the average fare of American street railways is 7.14 cents with a tendency toward lower fares...

Buses tear up the streets paid for at public expense while electric lines lay their own tracks and street and pay taxes on the same...
