Having trouble with aerials suspended from trees? It is due, probably to changing capacity when the tree is blown by the wind or breaking when the strain is great. Here's a good way to overcome most tree trouble. One end of aerial is attached to your house with its lead wire running to set. To the other end fasten a strip of rubber from an automobile inner tube in place of the regular insulation. To the free end of the strip of rubber fasten a rope and run the rope through a wheel pulley. On the end of this rope, now through the pulley, fasten a heavy stone to keep the aerial from getting slack. To the free end of the pulley attach a rope and bind the rope around the tree. The results are obvious.

One cause of poor reception has been discovered to be caused by the screws holding the contact plates and the nuts on a tube socket being loose. Also the nuts holding the screws in the rheostat work loose and rattling results. Tighten all screws and nuts from time to time.

A crystal cuts expense. Sets using a crystal detector and four amplifier tubes draw only half as much current as sets using a soft vacuum tube detector and four amplifying tubes.

A little vaseline placed on the terminals of a storage battery will prevent corrosion.

Many complain that their set worked all right last week but won't work now. Examination proves nothing amiss, even the batteries being all right. Often the trouble lies in a connection which has become corroded through the use of too much soldering flux. This may not show on the surface. Better re-wire the whole set.
