A HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATION

A recent survey of five widely separated states show that 3.35 per cent of the farm population is enrolled in high schools, compared with 3.55 of the non-farm population going beyond the grades. This should give pause to the people who regard the farm as a "back woods" area where education is not rated very highly.

is valuable to the tiller of the soil just as it is to the pupil who goes into the mercantile business or takes up one of the professions.

When parents debate the question this fall about sending their children to high school, they will probably ask: "Will it pay in dollars and cents?" A survey of three representative areas in Indiana, Illinois and Iowa shows that tenant farmers with a high school education receive an average annual labor income of $526 a year more than the men with only a common school education.

A college education will add to this average $435 a year, making the income of college graduates $979 more a year than the labor earnings of the men with only a common school education.

Cornell University has estimated that a high school education is worth as much to a farmer as $6,000 worth of bonds bearing 5 per cent interest, and that a college education is worth twice that much.

Many agencies have conducted investigations, all providing conclusive evidence that the better trained farmers receive the better incomes. The same holds true of any other line of life-work. The trained men and women are the ones who win the better positions and who advance more rapidly.

With the preponderance of the evidence on the side of education, every thinking boy and girl will endeavor to go as far as it is humanly possible for them to go in acquiring knowledge.
