

GRATITUDE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WHEN Jack came to Seattle with out acquaintances and with very inadequate financial resources, it was Coulter who took him into his office, gave him a job, made friends for him, and set him on his feet. The old man was proud of the boy, for Jack had a good physique, he had brains, he wore his clothes well, and he was well-mannered.

He made friends easily. His position in Coulter's office made for him a wide circle of acquaintances, and it was not long until he had joined a club, was into society and became one of the well-known men of the town.

Then he gradually drifted away. Money was more plentiful, social pleasures attracted him, he had little to do with his old friend, and almost, if not completely, forgot who it was who had given him a start. Ultimately he went off to a distant city.

"What do you hear from Jack?" I asked Coulter one day when I was in his office.

"I haven't heard from him," he replied.

"What's he doing?" I inquired.

"I'm ashamed to say it, but I really don't know. You see, he never told me, he never even said good-bye to me when he went away, and I haven't had a word from him since he left."

"But he owes almost everything to you," I said. "I should think you'd use faith and never help a boy again, when you get no gratitude, no appreciation."

"Kindness shown to others, like charity," he replied, "is its own reward. I learned long ago, to do what I could to help young fellows and to be content with the personal satisfaction that comes from knowing that I have done a worthy thing. I never expect gratitude. Sometimes it comes, and this unexpected appreciation that one gets from having helped a man is the sweetest sort of reward, but I am never disappointed if I fail to receive it."

And he was right. Youth is thoughtless, selfish, and often ungrateful. It should be enough, regard to, any man to realize that he has done what he could in giving every young fellow a chance.

A man can't be a quitter if he never starts.

Spanish Modes for Fall

Stylists travel to all quarters of the earth in search of inspiration for new modes. This year the costumes of ancient and modern Spain caught their fancy and now we see reflections of these Spanish styles in our present-day apparel. In military the Spanish sailor and the toreador hat grace the heads of many Americans in adaptations first made welcome by the Parisians. One of these dashing sailors is shown here in black hat and push.

Gorgeous fringed and embroidered scarfs and shawls, lace dresses and the large Spanish combs that distinguish evening modes, show that fashion's eyes lingered long on the romantic apparel of Spain.

In Halifax County 7,500 acres of cotton is being dusted within a radius of ten miles of Scotland Neck. A car of hogs and a car of baby beves were sold from the county recently and another car of hogs is ready for the market. One car of grade Shropshire ewes and four pure bred rams were bought by farmers of the county this month. Halifax is fighting the boll weevil as he should be fought.

Select those cotton plants with the most mature bolls and save enough seed from them to plant an acre next year, remembering that scrub seed will produce scrub crops, say agronomy workers for the State College extension division.

Richard Linthicum

One of the busiest men at the Democratic national committee headquarters in Washington is Richard Linthicum, who handles the great mass of publicity for the party. Linthicum knows the newspapers of the country by heart and hundreds of the small town dailies depend on him to furnish them with the last word in Democratic news.

BREAD PRICES

With the advance in the price of wheat, it is predicted that bread prices will also soar.

The rapid climb of wheat may make this necessary, but it is well to remember that labor is by far the largest item which enters into baking of a loaf of bread.

Labor is high-priced, which has been responsible for bread failing to get to pre-war levels. It is also the reason for many other commodities remaining at close to war-time prices.

The baker was given a clean bill of health in the government investigation during the year and he is not likely to take advantage of the rise in the price of wheat unless it actually increases the cost of making bread.

Human nature is so contrary that it doesn't want what it's got, but hankers for what it hasn't.
