FRIEND BANK BOOK

(By James Edward Hungerford)
Old Bank Book, how often you've blessed me!
To look at you fills me with pride. Though hard times have often hard-pressed me,
You've stuck like a pal by my side. No matter what troubles o'ertook me, When I was in need of a friend, Though others were false and forsook me,
On you I could always depend.
Your start, I will never forget it; The proud day on which you were born.
A bill—I had worked hard to get it— A ten-dollar bill, old and worn. Time's passed since I gave you existence,
With part of a very small wage. But, backed up by toil and persistence, You've proven a boon now with age.
Though ill-luck has often assailed me, And caused me to nearly lose heart, You're one that has never yet failed me—
Have helped me to take a fresh start. Though sickness and sorrow have racked me, And troubles have come without end, For all of these years you have backed me,
Old Bank Book, and proven my friend.
