OUR RALEIGH LETTER

By M. L. Shipman

Raleigh, May 11.—Governor McLean's announced determination to hold expenses of the State within its income was demonstrated in a practical manner last week when he issued a statement to all department heads regarding trimming their budgets. The Governor was on solid ground for he spoke facts. Outlining to each department and institution the allowances made for their support during the year, the Governor called attention to the fact that the State's income was falling behind anticipated collections and that, as director of the budget, it was necessary to exercise the power vested in him to make the expenditures square with the income. His announcement means that unless income of the state shows a large increase, and this is unlikely, the amount allowed each department and institution will be cut approximately seven percent, for the fiscal year from July 1, 1925, to July 1, 1926.

During the week the State Highway Commission let contracts for thirteen road projects in various sections of the State. Seven other projects will be held in abeyance for the present until lower bids are obtained.

The tragic affect of the failure of the Mattamuskeet Lake drainage project in Hyde county was emphasized during the week when the Department of Commerce issued a statement showing that farm lands in the county has decreased in value $900,000 from 1920 through 1924. This is believed to have been largely caused by the overflow of Lake Mattamuskeet and the flooding of some of the most fertile land in the State. A contract recently has been let to a mid-west concern by which it is hoped to reclaim this land for agriculture by properly draining the area.

Gutzon Borglum came back into the Raleigh limelight with a speech at Meredith college in which he asserted North Carolina must take sides in the Stone Mountain controversy. He described what he had done and reviewed his split with the Monumental Association leading to his being dismissed. At the same time a State member of the Association stated that regardless of how much personal sympathy there might be in North Carolina for Mr. Borglum, it was necessary to close the ranks and go ahead and said in completion of the memorial to the Confederacy which is being carved on Stone Mountain.

The Raleigh police started a drive against vice during the week when a list of the women engaged in immoral practices was obtained and they were told to "get out." There is no indication as to whether the drive will be a permanent proposition or merely another gesture such as is often made for control of the "social evil."

Six physicians of Durham will go on trial here on May 25 in Federal Court for violating the Harrison anti-narcotic law. They were arrested recently in the Bull city when a drive was started there and in other North Carolina cities to clean out the evil.

Much interest has attached during the week in Raleigh to the trial of the mob which removed Joseph Needleman from the Martin county jail and mutilated him. The trial in progress at Williamston has excited nation wide interest and the indictment of 28 men marks the first time in the history of the State that a mob has been indicted en masse. Newspaper men returning here from the trial for the week end reported that the State had a strong case against the men and that probably Judge Sinclair, who is known to be "hard boiled" in such cases would have an opportunity of sending a number of the mob members to the pen for long terms.

The Rev. William S. Shacklette, chaplain of State Prison, was quoted by the News-Observer last Thursday as declaring that 80 percent of men have their price and 55 percent of women in the State were "crooked." The statement aroused wide protest but on Friday the chaplain came back with a vehement statement in the same paper to the effect that he had been misquoted and "half truths" had been published. He criticized what he termed "unethical" conduct on the part of the newspaper for publishing portions of a conversation in which certain statistics were mentioned, and after he declared he had told the reporter he had nothing to say for publication.

Eric W. Rogers, formerly of Charleston, S. C., has been named to head the North Carolina Bureau of the Associated Press with headquarters at Raleigh, succeeding Robin King, resigned. Mr. Rogers had several years newspaper experience before coming with the Associated Press three years ago. He has been in Raleigh with the organization for two years. At the same time it was announced that W. E. Richardson, former secretary to Governor Morrison, had been engaged by The Associated Press in charge of its State news mail service to the papers. Mr. Richardson is a man of wide newspaper experience.

The North Carolina Association of Optometrists will be in session here Wednesday and Thursday of this week. On Monday the American Association for the Study of Feeble Minded closed a four day convention here.

$1,500,000 in schools equalizing funds will be divided here on June 1 among the counties of the State, it is announced by Superintendent of Public Instruction Allen. Sixty seven counties will participate in the funds.

The new board of Caswell Training School met in Raleigh during the week to organize it was announced that the new state equalizing board would meet probably on Monday May 11, and the Corporation Commission attended a hearing at Richmond on freight rates which lasted most of the week. It was Virginia's protest against certain rates of North Carolina and was heard by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Chief Justice Favills of the Iowa Supreme Court was in North Carolina during the week as the guest of R. O. Everett, of Durham, and was entertained in Royal fashion by his host. He also visited the Governor and members of the North Carolina Supreme court.

State Insurance Commissioner Wade issued a warning to all insurance underwriters that they must obtain new licenses before proceeding with their business in the State. He declared that agents who had applied for licenses could not, under the law, practice until their licenses were granted.

Governor McLean during the week appointed Dr. H. V. Wilson of the University of North Carolina and Frank Wood of Edenton to represent the State at a conference called by Secretary of Commerce Hoover to consider means of protecting the fishing industry of the Atlantic seaboard.

Colonel Fred A. Olds was the honor guest of the Raleigh Lions Club during the week and the historian of North Carolina who is known affectionately from "Murphy to Manteo" and whose name is a by word to practically every school child of the State, was accorded many a pretty compliment.

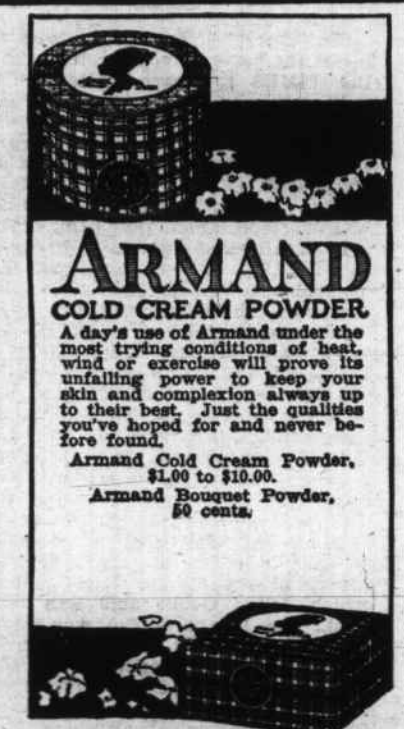

Chief Justice W. P. Stacy, president ex-officio of the judicial conference created by act of the last General Assembly, has called the membership of the body to a conference here on Thursday, June 25th. The conference is to be composed of Supreme and Superior court judges and a representative of the legal profession from each of the 20 judicial districts, the latter having already been named by the Governor.

On Friday the Corporation Commission issued an order requiring all busses to inaugurate a system of checking baggage similar to that now in vogue on all public carriers. The amount of baggage carried shall not be greater than can safely be handled without causing inconvenience to passengers.
