SEPTIC TANK NEEDED ALONG WITH WATER

Raleigh, April 9.—The farm home equipped with that vital necessity, running water, also needs an inexpensive system of sewerage disposal. Such a system is needed in the ordinary septic tank.

"Statistics gathered during the war showed that certain diseases are more prevalent in the country than in the city, despite the time honored statements about healthy country life," says David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer at State College. "These diseases usually fall under those classified as coming from impure water, which is intimately connected with sewage disposal. But aside from this, we cannot develop a refined, cultured citizenship in communities where sanitary precautions are ignored."

For those farms having running water in the home, by far the best provision for disposal of the sewage is the septic tank, states Mr. Weaver. The installation of a complete system is not expensive. Ordinary labor on the farm may be used in construction and plans for building may be secured free of charge from the agricultural engineering office.

Mr. Weaver and his associates have prepared a short mimeograph circular which gives drawing and descriptions of simple septic tanks. The circular describes where such a tank may be located, the size needed, how the forms are constructed, the concrete work needed, the disposal field to be used and how to care for the tank after installation.

This circular has been prepared for distribution to farmers of North Carolina and is available on application to David S. Weaver, department of agronomy, State College, Raleigh. A postal card or letter asking for Agronomy Information circular 15 will bring a prompt response.

"We should like to see one of these tanks installed on each farm where there is running water in the home," says Mr. Weaver. "The tank simply provides a working place for hosts of bacteria which break up the solid matter into liquid gas."

HOME WATER SUPPLY NO LONGER A LUXURY

Raleigh, April 9.—Now that there are all kinds of inventions and devices to lessen the hard work of the farm, there is no longer any excuse for the farm home not to have an adequate supply of running water.

"Every farm home in North Carolina not now equipped with a home water supply may secure one of some kind," declare David S. Weaver, agricultural engineer at State College. "Even the simplest, consisting of only a pitcher pump at a sink in the kitchen with a drain for carrying away the waste, will cut down the hard work and long hours in this work shop."

Mr. Weaver states that a good pitcher pump may be secured for three dollars, a force pump at nine dollars and a sink at ten and with pipe and fittings as reasonable in price as they are, there is little reason for the farm home not to have at least one of the inexpensive systems. The pitcher pump cannot be used effectively if the water level of the well is over 22 feet below the level of the kitchen sink. Another form of lift pump may be used however, and it costs but little more than the pitcher pump.

A slight addition to this system in the form of a barrel or tank placed on the ceiling joists and with a connection to the sink will relieve the housewife of most of the pumping. A days supply may be stored in a few minutes time and can be instantly available by the simple opening of a faucet. To improve the system still further the water front in kitchen stove can be connected to a hot water tank and then both hot and cold water will be available.

Mr. Weaver states that every woman on the farms of North Carolina is entitled to this simple relief from the drudgery of carrying water and emptying the waste. With the systems available at so little cost, husbands, sons and fathers should arrange it so that this can be done.

Ford Licks Dodge, Buick and Others in Hill Climbing Test

"Test run advertising is featuring the campaign of the E. J. Negy Motor Company, Throckmorton, Texas. Mr. Negy drove the Ford Coupe 40 miles in 37 minutes over dirt roads with many curves, hills and creeks. After this rigid test the radiator was only warm. No rattles developed, says the dealer, and the time was sworn to by notary.

"The new Ford pulled over the Blacksher Hill, starting on the hill in high and going over the crest at 15 miles per hour, also in high. Buick, Dodge, Chrysler 62 and 62, Oldsmobile, Willys-Knight and Chevrolet, in a similar attempt failed to do this and lost $250 competition money."
