OUR RALEIGH LETTER

By M. L. Salpointe

Raleigh, January 20.—With the exception of a rather surprising change in a state office, nothing of great importance occurred during the past week, though the air was filled with political murmurings. Raleigh citizens viewed these with interest and was also somewhat interested in Governor Gardner's "live at home" campaign which he was carrying to the eastern section of the state. Difficulties within the state Republican party over the chairman ship of the party were of interest also. The week was marked by several fatal automobile accidents, while numerous men of note were entertained officially and unofficially.

Governor Gardner went into Eastern Carolina with his "Live at Home" campaign and received a great reception. He stressed the idea that North Carolinians should grow and raise what they need in every line in order to keep money from going out of the state, and especially urged all to fall in line with the idea. Huge crowds received the Gardner message with great enthusiasm, which was very pleasing to the executive, who believes if he can put this idea over effectively North Carolina will be a much wealthier state in the near future and her farmers will be happy prosperous men.

I. M. Bailey, who succeeds A. J. Maxwell as corporation commissioner several months ago when the latter was made revenue commissioner, resigned this position during the week, and immediately was appointed counsel for the corporation commission, a position he held before taking the higher in honor but less in salary job of commissioner. Financial reasons prompted the change, which was acquiesced in by Governor Gardner, as he believes Mr. Bailey to be a good man. Immediately Governor Gardner appointed Stanley Winborne of Murfreesboro to succeed Mr. Bailey on the commission. Mr. Winborne is a close and ardent supporter of Governor Gardner. In making the announcement of the changes Governor Gardner took occasion to speak highly of both men.

Visitors during the week in the Capital City included General Frank R. McCoy, commanding officer of the Fourth Corps area of the United States Army. He visited with Adjutant General Metts and went over official matters, later being entertained at luncheon. David Lawrence, noted editor and political writer of Washington, came down to speak at the newspaper institute at Chapel Hill and also spoke in Raleigh. He was entertained early in the day with a stag breakfast at the executive mansion. Later spoke from here over the radio and also was the chief speaker at a joint meeting of all Raleigh civic clubs. Former governor William E. Sweet of Colorado was another prominent visitor, who made a stirring address at State College. He pleaded for courage in politics and adherence to conviction instead of party lines. Another visitor was Colonel Wade Harris, editor of the Charlotte Observer, who visited around in political circles and then announced that officialdom was entirely silent on the Bailey-Simmons race, though many of them talked but "not for publication." He believes in the triumph of the Simmons fight and his newspaper the Charlotte Observer is supporting Mr. Simmons.

Deaths and accidents resulting in deaths saddened Raleigh during the week. Mrs. James Y. Joyner, wife of the former superintendent of public instruction in the Aycock administration, died suddenly, bereaving Raleigh of a woman well beloved by all and who was known for her many good works, and her true humility and gentility of spirit. J. E. Thomas died in a local hospital. He had many friends. For a period of a few months last year he accepted the post of official executioner of the state, and never ceased to regret that he did. He resigned and, his friends say, brooded to death over the fact that he had sent a dozen men to their deaths by switching on the current for the electric chair. A. R. Wade, Jr. was killed in an automobile accident. He was a well known traveling salesman. Jack Farar, well known and popular young tobacco salesman was killed in an automobile accident. The state department announced that automobile accidents in North Carolina claimed 690 lives last year, an increase of two percent over the previous year. Raleigh citizens heard with considerable sorrow that Mrs. W. N. Everett, widow of the former secretary of state, was at death's door in her Rockingham home with double pneumonia. Mrs. Everett was a popular woman when she lived in Raleigh, and had the same reputation throughout the state. At this writing she was still alive, though in a very serious condition.

The interest continued to grow in the forthcoming senatorial fight between Senator Simmons and J. W. Bailey. There were as many different reports on the outlook reaching Raleigh as there were politically-minded visitors to the capital city. Some claim Bailey will have the lead, others are just as certain that Senator Simmons will win easily. All concede, however, despite the announcement by both candidates that it will be a quiet fight, that there will be a rousing political battle before the end of the campaign. Governor Gardner, evidently talking not of the fact that interest in this fight might overshadow all other races for office, came forward with a plea to folks to pay greatest attention to the selection of local and county officers, to the end that the right kind of commissioner and the right kind of a legislature will be selected. He said the greatest problems are right at home, and the way to solve them is to elect men of character and ability to fill the local offices and to represent the counties in the legislature.

The state was informed during the week of the unpleasant fact that there is likely to be a large deficit in the State prison operating fund this year, probably about $315,000. The deficit of 1929 ran between $150,000 and $175,000. Superintendent Pou, in defending his regime points out that of 46 state prisons of which 1929 figures were available, 38 had a higher per capita per annum cost than the North Carolina prison system. The great difficulty in North Carolina is finding work for the convicts. There are 2,316 in prison, and only a few hundred are regularly employed, though a large number of them are used on the various prison farms. The incapacitated list is already too large for successful operation under present conditions, says Mr. Pou.

Democrats were interested in the fight within the Republican party because of the fact that Brownlow

Jackson, marshal for the western district also holds down the job of state chairman. The fight has been brewing undercover for several months. Evidently it has gotten a little too hot for Mr. Jackson, who let it be known in the papers yesterday that he would retire as state chairman. It seems certain that James Duncan of Greensboro, one of the Republican members of the legislature, will be selected to take his place.
