BAILEY AND SIMMONS

MAHLER WRITES ABOUT

"It is remarkable to see the amount f interest that is being taken in the Simmons-Bailey contest by papers without the borders of North Carolina," said Fred G. Mahler of Raleigh, the other day. "In the last three weeks there have been two long articles in the New York Times on the contest now beginning here. These vere contributed by Robert E. Wiliams of the News and Observer staff, and were very admirable reviews of the current situation. Mr. Williams brought out the fact that the majority of the smaller county papers as well as most of the dailies in the State have come out in support of Mr. Balley. The News and Observer, accord-ing to its time-honored custom will pursue a strictly neutral course and the Greensboro News, very much the same course. The leading Simmons papers are of course, the Winston-Salem Journal and the Charlotte Ob-This seems to give Bailey server. a strong leverage of influence to be gin with. In fact it can be said that the friends of Senator Simmons are apparently marking time in these early days of the fight. Certainly the hand of Senator Simmons friends has not been revealed so far, but to return to the outside interest it is noteworthy that the Northern papers are taking so much interest in our local affair. The Boston Transcript in discussing the fight said editorially a few days ago that the proof of North Carolina's break away from its long-time Democratic Democratic dominance would be shown this year. That if Senator Simmons were renominated, it would prove conclusively that the State had broken definitely with its party leanings, and that the vote of 1928 was more than a surface indication. They went into a review of Senator Simmons' career, recalling the power he has been for so many years in the State's affairs, that it was interesting to remember that he had been a member of the House back in the Eightles and had been beaten for reelection by a Negro. It also recalled how his appointment to the Colleltorship of In-ternal Revenue back in 1893 by Pres-ident Cleveland has caused a National furore. Of course his victorious light to redeem the State from the Negro vote was likewise recalled. Naturally, the Transcript, a strong Republican paper would like to see a Republican elected to succeed Simnons from North Carolina, but it is very dubious about the election of one of that party. Looking between the lines however, it is perfectly clear that the Republicans of the North wouldmuch prefer to see Senator Simmons returned than Mr. Bailey. And this notwithstanding the fact that the Senator has worried the President lately in regard to the Executive's tariff ideas right much, for he hasn't hesitated to align himself with the so-called Insurgent group of Western Senators like Capper, Norris, Borah and others. But in spite of all this, they feel that Senator Simmons is a man that can be trusted not to run amuck,-they know him well and they don't know Mr. Bailey. Unquestionably one of the strongest cards on the Senator's side is his long-time service in the upper branch of the National Legislature, with all the dignity and prestige that he has gathered with the years. Whereas as it will be argued, Mr. Bailey will have to face the handicap of being a new man with relatively unimportant committee assignents, and that so far as personal influence is concerned ha will be practically nil for a number of years. Another handicap that Bailey will have to face, is in the fact that the chief source of his strength is also a source of weakness-that is that the very men who are giving him the most outspoken support now are the men he fought in the prohibition land and San Francisco at 12,000 feet altitude.

pressed himself as much concerned over the outlook, saying that though he admired Mr. Bailey very much, that when the effort was to be made to overhaul Senator Simmons and his record, that he feared for the life of the party in the State. Of course this will be taken by many as a statement of fear from a man of declining years, still there is much concern over the coming fight among a large number of the party's veteran fighters in the State. Meantime the interest of the Nation is centered on North Carolina, and everything that happens here in the coming weeks is going to be duly heralded in the big papers of the country."

k revenge on mons, for his conduct in 1928. Of course, it must never be thought for a moment that the majority of the Bailey supporters are pro-liquor men, for there will also be a number of life-long prohibitionists on his side. But there is no question that the vociferous support of the liquor Dem-ocrats for Bailey is more of a hin-drance than a help. On the other hand there is Bailey's party record which on the whole is fairly clear. It has been charged by some of his chemics is that more than once he has been un-duly kindly to the Republicans, but it will be hard to prove this. The fact that his brother was Republican fact that his brother was republican fact that his brother was republican ome of his enemies in former years Postmaster for eight years in Raieiga under McKinley and Roosevelt, will be brought forward, but will probab-ly have little effect. There is no doubt that Bailey has been a treme dous fighter for the Democratic party in the State all during the last thirty years, and this wi'' stand him in good stead when his enemies begin to pick flaws in his record."

Any prophesy as to what the Ke-publicans plan to do at this early stage of the game is only surmise, but the statement is hazarded that in case of the renomination of Senator Sim-mons that party will make no great fight to prevent his election in Novem-ber. On the other hand if Balley receives the nomination they will be in-clined to put up a stiff fight, particu-larly if a man like judge Meekins, with his consistently strong prohibi-tion record is the nominee. They will claim that the Democrats in punishing Senator Simmons and putting Mr. Bailey forward, that they are turn-ing their back on the express will of the people in 1928, when thousands of Democrats deserted their party on the prohibition issue. It begins to look like there is going to be an even break in the Primary of June 7th, and a pretty big Republican vote in the November election especially if Bailey is the nominee.

Many of the older Democrats are distinctly worried over the prospect of the airing of the party linen this spring. A prominent Wilmington lawyer in Raleigh the other day ex-
