STATE COLLEGE ANSWERS TIMELY FARM QUESTIONS

QUESTION: How can I save time in growing sweet potatoes?

ANSWER: Two men with a tractor did as much work as 16 men in getting ready for a sweet potato crop on the farm of G. W. Wright of Beaufort. Formerly the land was broken, rows marked, land opened with a plow, fertilizer drilled, and the land rebedded. This was 8 operations for one man, or one operation for each of eight men. Now Wright connects his tractor to the fertilizer distributor-planter combination, and removes the chain so as to throw the planter out of gear. In one operation he opens the land, distributes the fertilizer, and beds the land ready for planting. Since the tractor runs twice as fast as a man walks, Wright figures the operation equivalent to the work of 16 men by the old method.

QUESTION: How can I, a cotton ginmer, get the Smith-Doxey classing service on cotton for my gin and my farmer customers?

ANSWER: Any ginmer interested in having this service for his gin customers and his gin should immediately contact his county agent. A ginmer to be eligible for this service must be listed, and all applications must be sent in by August 1. Application blanks will be found at the office of the county agent.

QUESTION: I have yellow streaks in my alfalfa field. How would you account for these streaks?

ANSWER: The farmer had used 90 bags of hydrated (quickly available) lime on 4 acres and the spreader had overlapped in making the rounds. This gave an extra heavy application of the quickly available lime and resulted in a forced extra potash on the yellowing streaks. "This field shows the objection of using quickly available lime, rather than dolomitic limestone, unless proper precautions are taken in spreading it."
