Bickett Lives Again

On the occasion of the presentation of the portrait of the late Gov. Walter Bickett in the Senate chamber yesterday—Armistice Day—that very human and eloquent Chief Executive seemed to live again as friends and admirers from many parts of the State looked upon the portrait painted by Mrs. Mary Graves Rees, which will adorn the walls of the Governor's Mansion. It was an occasion of fitting a truly original, constructive and patriotic Chief Executive.

The address by A. J. Maxwell, chairman of the commission, a key man in the Bickett administration, was a revealing appraisal of a career that brought advancement and glory to the Commonwealth. The presentation speech by Judge Varner was a gem. The acceptance by Governor Broughton reached the high-water mark of portraiture. The tribute by the presiding officer, Sanford Martin, who was private secretary to the Governor, was a beautiful heart estimate of one beloved. Concluding his memorial address, Mr. Maxwell quoted the eloquent farewell of Governor Bickett in his message to the General Assembly before retiring from the office of Governor, which is as follows:

I shall carry with me from the office many sweet and glorious memories, but the one memory that will forever outshine them all is of the 80,000 sons of Carolina who, at their country's call, marched forth to fight and die for God and for humanity. Let us not forget, I write it down in this last chapter and certify to all the generations that the one stupendous, immortal thing connected with this administration is the part North Carolina played in the World War. Everything done in the field of taxation, of education, of agriculture, of mercy to the fallen, of the physical and social regeneration of our people—all of it is but "a snowflake on the river" in the gigantic and glorious presence of the 80,000 men who plunged into the blood-red tide of Of. Of these 80,000 men, 2,338 "went west"—far beyond the sunset's radiant glow. I shall always be grateful to remember that I was sometime their captain and always their comrade in the Farm flocks of sheep should be given individual treatment for worms about December 1.

A string of "easy payments" certainly makes the months gallop along.

The farm population in the United States is about 4,800,000 less than 4 years ago. About half these people left the farm in 1942.

Mistress: "This food tastes terrible. Did you salt it?"
New Cook: "Yes'm, but I never used that brand before. It was called Epsom Salts."
