Whatever explanation man may have for this phenomenon; whatever his feeling about the beauty, the dangers, or the nuisances of a snowfall such as is being experienced here presently, snow will always be with us.

College To Host Prep Players

Louisburg College will host Franklin County High School basketball players, coaches and managers at their game here Saturday night against Old Dominion. Players from the Nash-Wake-Edgecombe Conference schools will also be invited to attend the game. No admission charges will be made to these prep players, which includes the girl basketballers.

Franklin County Schools were originally scheduled to attend the now-postponed game with the East Carolina Freshmen Wednesday night. Snow forced a postponement of this game.

The Hurricanes, aided by the return of Ronnie Johnson, are expecting their basketball fortunes to swing upwards in their remaining games. The locals thus far have had a season marked with some degree of success but also with several disappointments.

Following the Old Dominion game Saturday night, the Hurricanes' next home stand is in February against the Pirates of East Carolina Fresh.

Postponed

The New Hope Christian Church has postponed their hamburger supper that was scheduled for Saturday night, January 29, until February 19.

short schedules.

No major accidents have been reported during the snowfall, but several minor ones occurred. Most of these consisted of automobiles leaving the roads and becoming stuck in ditches. This was a frequent sight throughout the area.

Certain streets were marked off for the sledders, mostly children, and the popular snowball fights could be seen everywhere. Sledders on Jolly Street here continued well into the night Wednesday as a number of grown-ups joined their youngsters in the popular winter pastime.

Most meetings in the area were postponed. Louisburg College postponed a scheduled basketball game Wednesday night against East Carolina freshmen. All high school basketball games scheduled for Friday night are likely to be postponed. The County has a rule that when there is no school during the day, there is no extra-curricular activity at night.

Cold temperatures are predicted for the next few days, the hazardous road conditions are expected to continue at least into the weekend. The State Highway Patrol issued warnings this morning that the roads continue very hazardous and requested everyone to stay off the highways unless it was absolutely necessary to travel.

Louisburg town crews had a massive job of clearing the main arteries in town early this morning, but many rural roads still have not been cleared, some from the initial snowfall Wednesday. Chains and snow tires have been declared a must for motorists.
